IM Board Plans Football Change

Nine-Man Team, All Pass Plays, Standing Line Suggested To Cut Accidents

Changes in the present form of intramural football will be discussed and voted upon at next week's meeting of the Intramural board, according to Eugen C. Bischoff, director of intramurals.

In an effort to reduce the number of injuries to participants, a survey was made of the ways in which other schools have solved the problem. The graduate course in Research Techniques in Major Sports conducted by Prof. John D. Lawther sent questionnaires to a large number of colleges in the country, and formed certain conclusions from the results.

It is apparent that the movement is to make the game more open. To do this the number of players on a team is reduced, all men are eligible for a forward pass, all plays must be forward passes or laterals, linemen may not crouch, but must stand in position until the ball is passed. This cuts down on power plays. In some cases only basketball blocks were legally used.

The plan to be proposed at next week's meeting consists of nine men on a team, six linemen and three backs, standing block in line play, and everyone eligible for forward passes. Through the opening up of the game and eliminating of power, it is hoped that injuries will be reduced to a minimum.

Phonographic recordings of the speech of distinguished faculty members of the college will be made by the division of speech to form the first part of a permanent album of open quote voices of Penn State.
