DADS' DAY

ANOTHER of these days that students could make so much more of, and never seem to find the time to, is the one that comes up tomorrow, Dad's Day.

Because we reach fewer dads than students, we direct our plea of making tomorrow a memorable one to those who can best accomplish it. How about it? Let's make Dad feel tomorrow that he is really tops. Let's show him a good time.

He is the fellow that in most cases has made this college life possible. It has been his worry and sacrifice to a great extent. A royal welcome to Dad will cheer him and let him realize that he is appreciated.

So to students we say—really welcome your Dads.

BETWEEN TWO FIRES

TWO unofficial wars have been raging for some time. The one in Spain flares at one end of the Eastern hemisphere and the China-Jap affair burns at the other end.

These two fires burning at either end of chronic volcanoes warn of that which may come. Hitler and Mussolini, representing the center of the volcanic force, have been conferring this week. What chemical reaction they may have upon each other is dangerous.

The onlooker cannot but visualize soon a burning Europe and Asia from the Rock of Gibraltar to the Nanjing River.

Sandwiched between a destined Fascist Spain and Fascist Germany and Italy is Left-wing France. Between Germany and Fascist Japan is Communist Russia. The old wound between Russia and Japan has been salved.

Fifty-two nations from the League of Nations framework have reprimanded Japan for her actions in what was called "strong language."

England, fearful of conflict, has her ablest diplomats at work. Internally, the United States is fanning class hatred. The old Ku Klux Klan has been dragged out. Labor is fighting itself. Business is torn between two fires. Unity of purpose has been sacrificed for unity of party.

Selfishness is the password. The signs are all there for eruption.

Where, youth, does that place us? The same place it always has. Slowly but surely a situation has come about where again the young generation will be left holding the bag.

What has alleged wisdom and experience taught? Nary a lesson. It all seems to be coming back again.

A MYSTERY TRIP

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S current trip west has been shrouded in mystery and undeclared as to purpose. It seems apparent that its primary purpose is too evident to be spoken of.

The old master is out politicianing again. It's the old game of keeping the public on your side when rumbles appear within the ranks. The Democratic party is split wider inside than anyone cares to admit. As long as the people don't think so far enough in advance to do anything about it, all is well.

Timed well the President will probably miss Hugo Black until late this winter and has a wonderful excuse for not having to appear at the AFL shindig. That would be politically embarrassing.

Yes, indeed, politics are wonderful. It's too bad that when issues arise the boys don't mean what they say, and do what they mean.

CONSCIENTIOUS WORK

THE CONSCIENTIOUS and effective manner in which a newly organized Student Tribunal has effected its work so far is deserving of commendation.

Confronted with the problem of preserving the spirit and ideals of Penn State spirit, this group has made remarkable strides in that direction.

It has been courageous and fair in action. It is hoped that this attitude will continue. It is time that Tribunal's work be recognized. They have a definite purpose and function, and have fulfilled it more ably than any such group in recent years.

CAMPUSEER

From Harry the Hound:

Via Lynn Christy, former Froth madman in town for a few days, comes the latest yarn concerning Harry the Hound, one-time Collegian editor by the name of Henderson.

It seems that Harry was roaming about Grand Central Station in New York where the ceilings are very high. Way up in the top are numerous chandeliers containing numerous lights. Station hands replace worn-out bulbs by lowering the chandeliers to the floor. Harry was around when such an operation took place.

Just as the workman was about to screw in a fresh bulb, Henderson rushes up with a paper and pencil and spatters:

"Pardon me, but could I have your autograph, Doctor Piccard?"

In The Line of Duty:

Major MacMullin's section of rotisse last Tuesday distinguished itself in asserting its fealty to the shackles of oppression. The platoon was drilling on the west side of the M. I. building where the land-slipping slopes form a sort of miniature hill.

The Major led the boys right over the uneven topography, probably figuring that the boys knew where they were going. But six of the group were so intent upon their work that they just didn't notice. Of a sudden their feet slipped from beneath them, and there they were right in the middle of things flat on their backs.

A Non-Paying Customer Writes:

It is rumored that the creation Howie Anderson, signman, has been wearing on his head is a hat . . .

Junior G-Man Chatter:

Our colleague, the Maniac, had so much success in organizing his local chapter of the Junior G-Men by nominating Carroll Chouinard, of public information, as the charter member, that we can't help but give him a few helpful tips.

Unfortunately, it is very difficult to start something new without a helping hand. We suggest to Carroll that he save Post-Toastie tops and send in for a Junior G-Man badge. This will start the local chapter off on the right foot. Similar to Chouinard's backing by the Chicago Daily News Trail Blazers, we could offer him a sticker for his car entitled: "How to set out on a long ride with the Penn State Collegian."

Collegiana:

Campy starts a new feature this time by telling about the girls left here with frat pins after their romances have graduated. Just a few each week. Forlorn Mary Taylor remembers last year when George Cissy, deltachi, was still here. Another, Bud Moore, left Maybelle Penley. Fran Kessler has the idea to overcome this—she is traipsing off to Philly this weekend to be with Louis Steinhilber, chiphi departed.

The boys from Watts Hall gave the Kappas their annual serenade the other night, improvising an orchestra and presenting various modes of the dance upon the Kappa lawn.

Sybil Connaut, A O pi, and Amory Dunn, deltachi, overcame the inconveniences of the local coughing epidemic, by spooning by telegram the other night. First Amory sent Sybil a message collect, and then she retaliated. What we call getting close without local irritation.

Two Features Add To Collegian Dance

Think you can miss it? "Miss '41" Booth Watmough's orchestra . . . opening social event of the fall season . . . all upon the presentation on the night of October 8 of the stub which comes with every subscription to the Collegian.

Hardly! Staying away from Reeball on the night of the Collegian dance will be as difficult and impossible to do as writing out a check with one dip of a Corner Room pen. Watmough, playing for the dance, has an all-Penn State band that is at present riding on the crest of the wave of campus popularity. "Miss '41," to be chosen as the most beautiful girl of the freshman class, should be equally as popular. And the Collegian dance is showing every indication of following the lead of its two features.

Permission for the freshmen to drop customs for the evening has been obtained as long as they are escorting women to the dance. The only admissions "sold" are those given gratis with each subscription to the Collegian. Subscriptions sell for $2.50 per year or $1.50 per semester and may be obtained by calling the Student Union desk through the College—711.

Venue Names Cadet Officers For 1937-38

With the approval of President Ralph D. Hetzel, Col. R. V. Venable has appointed Edgar D. Seymour as cadet colonel and commanding officer of the R. O. T. C. brigade for the current academic year. Max R. Machnicke was named brigade adjutant with the rank of cadet major.

Cadet lieutenant-colonel commanding the engineer regiment will be William B. Cleveland, while David E. Bauer, Jack G. Matze, and Donald H. Roush will command battalions in the same regiment with ranks of cadet major. Eugene Poquer will be cadet lieutenant-colonel commanding the infantry regiment, while battalion commanders will be Howard W. Bush, Richard E. J. Heyl, and Edward Mandel.

Changes in the personnel of the commissioned officers include the promotion of Maj. R. G. Barrows, senior engineering officer, to lieutenant-colonel, corps of engineers, and the addition of Maj. P. D. Yeuell, recently arrived from Hawaii, to the staff of infantry officers replacing Maj. V. L. James, who has been transferred to Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind.

Higgins Tops List Of Speakers At Non-Fraternity Fete Tomorrow Night

A cider party for non-fraternity men and their parents will be given by the Penn State club in the Old Main Sandwich Shop at 6 o'clock tomorrow night.

Football Coach Bob Higgins and members of his coaching staff will discuss the Gettysburg game and the future outlook for Penn State's football team. Robert Smith, athletic manager, will report on a survey of social and athletic interests of non-fraternity men.

Plan Dancing Classes

The entertainment program has been planned by George Baker, social chairman. Robert W. Werts, vice-president of the club, will preside at the meeting. Assistant officers of the club will be introduced by Russel G. Gohn, president, who also will outline the club's program for the remainder of the semester.

Central Railroad Tops Chinese System

"After 20 years the Bellefonte Central is much the same," says Samuel M. Dean '12, who recently rode it to complete his journey from China.

"However," he adds, "it is much better than many of the Chinese roads, which are frequently stopped by revolutions or wars on the track."

"When I last rode the Bellefonte Central, the train used to pick up the spikes. Now it seems they have a good roadbed. We only stopped two or three times and once to chase a cow off the track.

"We thought nothing of it in San Francisco when we asked for a ticket to State College," Dean said, "but the ticket agent had to look through several annals before he found the name of the railroad. Even then he was dubious, but he said that he would sell us the ticket."

No Speak English? Get A Foreign Diploma

Diplomas identifying the student in any language are offered by the College.

When a foreign student is graduated from here the name is engrossed on the diploma both in English and in the native language of the student.

The last to receive such a diploma was Woot Tseun Ng, an exchange student from Canton, China, who received the degree of master of arts.

Registrar William S. Hoffman believes Penn State is the only American college to provide this service to its foreign students.

Retailers To Hold 7th Annual Conclave Here

The seventh annual retail conference will be held in the Nittany Lion Inn next Tuesday and Wednesday.

Sponsored by the College, the conference will feature an address by Ralph M. Bashore, state secretary of labor and industry, who will discuss the new 44-hour week law.

Charles S. Wyand, instructor in economics, will open the conference Tuesday noon with a talk on "Is the Consumer a Menace?" The conference will close with a round-table discussion Wednesday night. No admission fees will be charged at any of the sessions.

The campus and farms of the College cover more than 2,000 acres.

Second Traffic School Planned For Next Year

Plans are already under way for the Second Annual Traffic Officers Training School to be held here, April 25 to May 6, 1938.

Lieutenant Frank M. Kreml, director of the Safety Division of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, has promised the cooperation of that organization in the College's second endeavor to aid Pennsylvania cities in the solution of their traffic problems.
