BUILDING WITH '41

EVERYONE, freshmen and upperclassmen alike, should turn out to see a promising freshman football team tackle Pitt on New Beaver Field tomorrow afternoon.

From what we have seen and heard, this year's freshman football team is the best and most promising bunch of boys that have hit State since her hey-day of athletics back in the teens. It seems that we really have something there—something that should be built and molded into an organization that will satisfy students, faculty, and alumni.

The way to preserve the fine start that the yearlings have made is to turn out tomorrow for the game with a spirit and support that will encourage the class of '41 to continue its good work.

For not only the freshman team has been something to be proud of, but the class as a whole. Better Penn State spirit has been exhibited by the incoming class than has been evident for a long time.

This year's newcomers have a fine scholastic entrance rating, the best yet. They are well-rounded, capable in all fields.

They have done things so far, and support tomorrow will be one way to insure their continued spirit and success.

SENATE DINES OUT

SENATE representatives will have dinner with women in the downtown dorms during the next few weeks to promote a better understanding of W. S. G. A. and to explain some of the house regulations. This is a splendid opportunity for the women to become acquainted with Senate members so that they can discuss their problems freely.

They need not limit their questions to the duties of the house president, but can ask anything that is puzzling them about student government, e. g., "How does the Judicial Committee operate?", if they have been fortunate enough to have avoided close contact with it.

They should feel at liberty to ask why we have certain regulations to clear up any misunderstanding. If they make intelligent queries they will probably discover some new angles that have governed Senate's decisions.

We hope that this won't be a one-sided affair, and that the downtown women will offer some suggestions that will benefit Senate. This co-operation should give the women a feeling of unity with W. S. G. A. that will make it a progressive organization.

—S. R. H.

A GREAT LECTURER

IN H. A. Overstreet, the Forensic Council has brought to the campus again this year another great lecturer and student. They have procured for student benefit a man who will produce a lecture on a par with the one Will Durant offered last year.

Mr. Overstreet has a broad experience and a wide reputation. His subject, "Human Behavior Under a Dictatorship," is one that is timely and of interest to all those concerned with current world problems.

Students and faculty should take advantage of his presence by attending and listening to the interesting things he will have to say. Forensic Council is to be congratulated for procuring again this year an excellent speaker with a pertinent subject.

UNDECLARED WAR IN CHINA

IF THIS SUBJECT that Dr. Koo will speak of both in chapel and at the Pledge Dinner Sunday is as promising as it sounds, students here this week-end will have the opportunity of educating themselves in the realm of international events.

Certainly a man as Koo should know something of the situation that has not been banted about as yet. Each fraternity should make sure that its pledges attend 100 per cent. Intrafraternity pledge dinners are better when speakers as Dr. Koo are the attraction.

CAMPUSEER

It Must Be An Honor

It really must be an honor to become a member of Pershing Rifles, we have discovered. We probably have the rotisse boys all wrong. Theirs is unquestionably a great organization.

When hopeful young Frosh petition to become members of that great fraternity, the Mystic Knights of the Sea, (pardon, we mean Pershing Rifles) they list their previous military and drill experience as qualifications. This is to make sure that men of proper calibre and experience make the grade.

Now take the case of Julian Gold, Sigma Tau Phi. There's really a man with a past! He made the organization because he once attended Kohut Military Academy (or some such fantastic place). And guess when he went? When he was seven years old.

And Speaking of Honor

And still along the lines of rotisse, we discover the perfect stooge, a real conscientious-like guy, Richard Haskell, of Nittany Avenue. He laid out two bucks the other day to have his rotisse uniform coat altered to fit. What a man!

A Fruitful Letter

Some time ago Sam Wyand asked his current problems class to write letters to agricultural bureaus and fruit farmers to find out what they did with their excess fruit production. It seems they sow oats under and kill pigs dead now to get rid of them, but Sam wanted to find out what they did with apples.

Not to be outdone, Jack Kulp, theta xi, and no mean apple polisher himself (as our tale will prove) wrote every state in the union to find out. The letters began coming in at the rate of seven or eight a day. Finally one day came a letter from Arkansas. It seems they didn't know what to do with their extra apples down there either, but right in the middle of the letter written by someone's secretary was a comment like this:

"I am a cute little girl 5 feet 2 inches tall, am rather athletic, and very interested in football. I have a hobby of collecting address of people that are far away. It's a mania with me. How about writing?" Or words to that effect.

If you think Jack was amazed, you should have seen Sam when he saw it. For Jack showed him the letter as proof of his having written about apples, although he seemed to have collected little about turning under apple trees.

Said Sam: "This is astounding. I've never seen anything like it. Let me have this; I'll have photostatic copies made."

Ain't Science Wonderful?

The newly laid 12-in. discharge line that is now servicing State College with its water supply turned up with an amazing accomplishment the other day.

It fed the boys out at the kdr house with a nice juicy worm of the horse-hair nature.

Ain't Nature Wonderful?

We learn that Franklin Banner, of journalism, is nature's most devoted follower by a remark that he passed in class the other day. It seems that he was analyzing a freshman co-ed for a feature story, or something of the kind.

Said Franklin: "Just picture her, a young freshman co-ed with her green ribbon on—that's all!" Need we go on?

Add Lovebirds

Snooper reports that he is more than shocked at the scandalous manner in which this Barnett girl has smoothie Klein wrapped around her finger. He says that for Klein to go with one girl for three weeks is not only unheard of but a bit scandalous, indeed. But Klein has really joined the henpecked husband class, asserts Snooper, for he was observed fastening the snaps on the back of Margie's cloak in the Corner Room after the President's reception the other night.
