

Gridmen Engage In Tune-up Today

Ending the first half of spring practice, Bob Higgins' gridmen meet Lock Haven State Teachers College in a scrimmage session on New Beaver field at 4 o'clock today.

Since coaches of both teams intend to halt play in order to give instructions, it was agreed that the session would be informal.

Coach Higgins intends to use his entire squad in the scrimmage, which will help put the team out of the rust of inactivity due to the bad weather. The starting backfield will probably consist of Joe Metro, Lloyd Ickes, Sam Kopach, and Tony Glanman-tonio.

Alex Barantovich and Grover Washbaugh will hold down the end positions while Dean Hanley and Carl Stravinsky will start as tackles. Joe Peel and Ted Nemeth will be posted at guard as Tor Toretli, former guard, moves to center.

Originally scheduled for Saturday, the scrimmage was postponed because of inclement weather. If weather again forces a postponement, Lock Haven will be unavailable at a later date since Coach Wynn Fredericks will end the Bobcat's spring practice drills tomorrow.

Individuals, Not Defects—Prof. Koepf-Baker

Instead of concentrating their attentions on the defects of stuttering and stammering, speech correctionists have turned to the persons who stutter and stammer, according to Prof. Herbert Koepf-Baker of the division of speech and director of the College speech clinic.

"The latest research into speech disorders have shown us that it is best to begin correction of speech faults with no set methods," Professor Koepf-Baker explains. "Methods used in one case will be utter failures in others. Strangely enough, we are beginning to discover that the person who shows speech disorders is more important than the disorder."

The clinic here is three-fold in its purpose: to diagnose and correct speech defects among the student body; to train clinicians of more than ordinary ability; and to sponsor a program of research into speech defects and their causes.

Blumer, Koch Tie For Stock Judging Honors

Thomas N. Blumer '39 and Martin L. Koch '39 tied for first place in the professional division of the annual livestock judging contest held Saturday afternoon in the judging pavilion. William H. Norris was the winner in the amateur division.

John E. Pascoe '39 was third in the professional division; William G. Silvis, fourth; and Henry B. Walton, fifth. In the amateur division, John G. Auld placed second; Ralph C. Handley, third; Isaac H. Easterbrooks, fourth; and R. H. DeLafield, fifth.

The winners in this contest will receive cups and medals at the Block and Bridle banquet on April 30 in the Sandwich Shop.

50 Architects Enter Stewardson Contest

Approximately 50 architectural students from the University of Pennsylvania, Carnegie Tech, and Penn State are entered in the preliminary competition for the annual Stewardson prize.

The project, "Community Buildings at the Center of a Small Town," was started last Saturday morning and will be due at 11 o'clock this morning. The five winners of this group compete in the final competition for a $1000 cash prize or travel and study in Europe.

Business Staff Named

Nine students have been named to next year's Student Handbook business staff. Julius Marymor '40, business manager, announced yesterday. Those selected were Eleanor Fineberg '41, Herman M. Fogel '40, Amos A. Goss '39, Shifra L. Kirschman '40, Josephine B. Miller '40, M. Elizabeth Miller '40, G. Naomi Pugh '39, Doris J. Schambelan '41, and Martha Shafferman '40.

Pick Representative

Six representatives to the Home Economics Council have been selected. They are: Marjorie F. Davis '39, Phyllis Herzog '39, Ruth H. Beach '40, Mary O'Connor '40, Jeanne Clark '41, and Josephine E. Condrin '41.

Harvard University has more than 69 squash rackets courts, more than any other college or university in the U. S.

One-half of one per cent of entering college freshmen are 15 years old or younger.

New H. E. Course Attracts Men Students

Every year more and more men are entering the division of home economics. No, they are not learning to care for the future home while the future wife spends the day at the office—they are students in a curriculum of hotel management which was added to the curriculum last year.

The course, a regular four year one, was added last year at the request of outstanding hotel managers and owners of the state.

According to Prof. Phyllis K. Sprague, director of the institutional administration division of home economics, this course gives its graduates a complete education in hotel management and administration.

Professor Sprague says that in credits carried and hours put in, this course is as heavy as one in engineering. Students in hotel management are given comprehensive studies in textiles, interior decorating, hotel layouts, food production, laundrying, and business. Emphasis is placed on courses in business.

Starting out with two students the first year, the enrollment has grown steadily and there are now eight men taking the complete course, as well as many others who are taking as much of it as they can work into their major curriculum.

Balis, Taylor Chosen In Rome Prize Finals

Joseph Balis and Charles C. Taylor '36 were two of ten chosen from a preliminary competition to enter in the finals for the Rome prize in architecture.

The winner, who receives an annual stipend of $1250 per year plus traveling expenses, will spend two years of study at the American Academy in Rome.

Balis placed second in this contest last year. At present, he is employed by McKim, Meade, and White, New York architects. Taylor is doing graduate work at Princeton University.

Rural Electrification Course Begins May 4

The fourth annual rural electrification course will be held here May 4, 5, and 6, Prof. Ralph U. Blasingame, head of the department of agricultural engineering, announced yesterday.

Cooperating with the College in presenting the course are the State Department of Public Instruction, the Pennsylvania Electric Association, and manufacturers of electrically operated equipment.

Dean Sackett Speaks At Louisiana State U.

Dean Emeritus Robert L. Sackett of the School of Engineering spoke on "Obligations of the Land Grant Colleges of Engineering to the State" at the dedicatory exercises of Louisiana State University on April 6 to 8, commemorating educational progress since 1930.

The program for the three days included general sessions, the formal dedicatory exercises, and conferences on current problems and trends in the field of education. All sections of the state and many sections of the nation were represented at the sessions and general conference.

Special dedication exercises were held for the Leche law building, a new group of five women's dormitories, the agricultural center, and La Maison Francaise.

I. E. Seniors Inspect Production Methods

Seniors in industrial engineering left Wednesday on their annual inspection trips to observe management methods and systems as well as manufacturing processes.

The students were divided into two equal groups, one concentrating its inspections in the Philadelphia area, while the second traveled to Pittsburgh.

Senior Finals Set For May 23-25

Senior final examinations will be held May 23, 24, and 25, Ray V. Watkins, scheduling officer, announced yesterday.

The regular examinations, Watkins said, will begin May 26 and end June 2. The hours for the exams will be 8 a. m., 10:20 a. m., 1:40 p. m., and 4 p. m.

Agriculture Museum Will Be Established

An agriculture museum will be established in the near future, but the place for housing such an exhibit has not been definitely decided, it was announced yesterday.

Acting upon an idea suggested by Prof. Clinton O. Cramer of the department of agronomy, Dean Ralph L. Watts has commissioned him to seek a suitable location and aid in soliciting material for exhibition.

Old agricultural implements, tools, and relics of all types that have been used on the farm will be included in the museum. Antiques which have a historical background of agriculture will be displayed.

Dean Watts has presented a 100-year-old lantern as the first gift in the prize collection.

Begin Rural Teaching

Thirty-five seniors in the department of rural education are practicing teaching in vocational agricultural schools throughout the state for four weeks, Prof. Henry S. Brunner, of the department of agricultural education, announced today.
