Centre County Goes 'Native' For Week At Grange Fair

During the week of Aug. 25, some 3,000 Centre County folks will go "native" on the Grange Park grounds in Centre Hall and live in tents for the entire seven days, following the annual tradition of the Grange Encampment and Fair activities.

Over 600 tents are rapidly being erected on the park grounds this week. Last year, 500 canvas shelters were raised which proved to be only half sufficient. Approximately 500 applications for tents were rejected.

The program this year calls for rallies by the Democratic and Republican parties on Wednesday, Aug. 31, a Grange rally on the following day, and the Grange Players and Amateur Hour contests will be held every evening of the Fair. P. F. Bauges, Altoona, director of the amateur hours, will accept registration blanks for the contests now.

Children Share Spotlight

In addition, a special "Children's Day" will be honored on Tuesday, Aug. 30, when the J-H boys and girls will have their various exhibits judged in the morning and the different clubs demonstrating recreational activities and games in the afternoon. Pigeon and poultry clubs will also have their annual round-up.

The fair is again under the direction of a committee of which George W. Ralston is president and Mrs. Samuel Grove, secretary. A small admission is charged for entrance to the fair grounds.

The fair grounds may be reached from the College by driving to Bualsburg and turning east to Old Fort. There the road turns north over route 53.

Ackley Explains New Tenure Act

Stating that, "I believe that married women and single women should be judged by the same standard—the standard of competence," Clarence E. Ackley, deputy superintendent of the department of Education, Harrisburg, defended the Teacher's Tenure Act. He spoke before a crowded auditorium in Home Economics building last Thursday evening.

"Although married women may have additional duties," he said, "it is also possible that they may not lose so much sleep by attending dances every night."

Dr. Ackley said that the efforts of some local school boards to oust married teachers were proving a booming Public opinion voiced through women's clubs and other groups was rapidly coming to the instructors' defense, he stated.

77 Cases In Court

Since the act went into effect this year, hundreds of cases have arisen and seventy seven of them have been carried to court. The attempt to amend the law in order to provide a three-year probationary period is not favored by Doctor Ackley. Several of the other states have found, he said, that this proviso has been used to evade the law entirely by firing all instructors just prior to the end of their probation period.

The designation, "substitute teacher," Doctor Ackley said, has had no legal existence since 1927 with the exception of its connection with substitute leaves of absence granted the regular instructors.

After the talk, the meeting was thrown open to discussion. Doctor Ackley answered many specific questions.

Colleges Hit On Teaching Method

Hall Blames 'Stagnant Education Condition' On Those Who Train Teachers

Speaking before the principals' and superintendents' conference last week, Dr. Sidney B. Hall, Virginia superintendent of public instruction, contended that those who train teachers are to be held responsible for the "stagnant condition in American education."

He said that college's cannot "damn" the poorly prepared high school graduate because they were trained by "products of the same colleges."

Specialization Old-Fashioned

"Teachers," Dr. Hall stated, "are being prepared in isolated and specialized fields and teachers prepared in this old-fashioned way are coming into schools thinking in modern times."

In a discussion of college preparation of high school and elementary school teachers, Dr. Hall said that the higher one goes in education the harder it becomes to modify fixed programs. The public is more ready to move forward with expanding the modern program of education than are school people themselves, he said.

100-Inch Telescope For Unit Nears Completion

A 100 inch telescope that will be used in the first observatory of the multiple unit presented by the Class of 1938, is nearing completion in the College laboratory, Dr. Henry L. Yeagley said. The mirrors used in these telescopes will be 10 inches in diameter, he said.

Workmen are leveling the ground for the construction of the first of the 12 observatories to be located east of the infirmary. Plans are to continue with the others after this one has been proved satisfactory.
