Above all, the Collegian will be tolerant. For in tolerance there is vision and there is might

Friday, December 2, 1938

DEAR GOVERNOR ELECT

ON JANUARY 1 the nation rings out the old year and rings in the new one.

However, the gong has already been rung on Penn State. For, in today's news columns we learn that the second $5,000,000 building program planned for the College under the General State Authority is doomed because the PWA has already allocated all of its funds.

With 11 new buildings slated for completion by June 1, this college faces a future of expansion and enlargement.

College authorities have already intimated that this institution must increase its enrollment by 3,000 in the next three years to keep faith with the people of the state.

The Pennsylvania State College, the Collegian is convinced, will keep faith with the people in the matter of enrollment.

However, an increased enrollment and its consequent increase in the college staff means something more than an influx of people.

An increased enrollment, among other things, necessitates adequate housing and feeding of the newcomers.

UP UNTIL TODAY, the solution of this problem was at hand. The second $5,000,000 building program planned for the college under the General State Authority contained provisions for:

- 1-A 400-room dormitory for women
2-Two men's dormitories and cafeteria for 1,000 men

These buildings, all income-bearing for the college, represented the major portion of the second GSA program, the remainder being additions and alterations to existing structures.

However, with the news from down where the Great White Father resides that the PWA already has allocated all of its funds, this program has gone by the board.

Nevertheless, the College still badly needs a building program comparable to the one just doomed.

NOW ON NOVEMBER 8, the people of this Commonwealth elected to the office of Governor, Arthur H. James, a mine's son who worked his way through college and thus should appreciate the benefits accruing from an up-to-date, tuition-free, state university.

Governor-elect James, during the heat of electioneering, criticized the General State Authority and its "undertakings." Among these undertakings, of course, is the building program now under way and the ill-fated second program.

Thus by a far-fetched inference, one might draw the conclusion that Governor-elect James does not approve of the needed expansion and development going on here.

However, the Collegian believes that this is not so.

IN CAMPAIGN literature distributed before the election and bearing his signature, Governor-elect James stated that he favored the following:

- 1-Long range planning for the educational system of the state
2-Federal aid for schools without federal control
3-Sufficient appropriations to meet the subsidy requirements of the present educational laws on the statute books
4-Legislation which will maintain the present educational standards
5-A public educational system which will more adequately fit youths to earn a livelihood.

In view of this excellent and commendable outlook on education, the Collegian urges Governor-elect James when he assumes office to do all in his power to continue the expansion of educational facilities in this state. Such a move would surely increase the confidence and faith the people of the state lodge in him as indicated by his election.—W. B. O.

CAMPUSEER

BY HIMSELF

"We, the undersigned, petition—"

The su office is continually displaying petitions ranging from advocating hair nets for evening wear to holidays for Penn weekend (remember?) Latest we begyoukindly sheet is a petition asking for the passage of the Ludlow Amendment, which would necessitate a referendum before the US could go to war, excepting invasion.

One of the local wits has tacked a rider on the petition which goes as follows:

"We suggest further, that in the event of a serious fire in the College, a vote be taken as to whether or not we call the fire department and a second vote to decide whether or not the student body should assist if the necessity arise."

Well, knowing the fire department as we do But may we add our bit?

WHEREAS we are constantly being petitioned by petitioners to sign petitions,

WHEREAS we never fail to sign any petition, WHEREAS we use a helluva lot of good ink in doing so,

Be it therefore resolved that we do away with petitions

We, the undersigned, do hereby petition the petitioners—it's a vicious cycle!

Bus, Buzz, Buzz

Overheard on the westbound bus "he wanted to get fresh with me. We parked out in the country someplace—he said he wouldn't take me home until I kissed him," just a Gamma Phi Beta talking out of turn.

Also Ran

As is the usual erudite ps custom, every beauty box ballot contains protest votes. Nominated in this year's Harvest Ball game poll were Leo Houck, jr., Bill Hoot, Deanna Durbin, Olive Oil, Minnie Mouse, Paul Mitten, and Dean Ray. Confidentially, campy says that Jean Smith will be crowned by ex-queen of the harvest, Jamie Gruber, also Collegian hq, with emphasis on the Collegian.

Damn Disturbing, eh what?

It happened Wednesday Lou Bell noted Flo Watkins with her hands under the newsroom table breaking up the lecture quiet. Sensing something to eat or at least something intriguing, Bell ordered her to pass whatever it was up to him. Up came the mysterious object, it got to Brad Owens, it was wet, cold Owens gasped the lushy snowball firmly, made Lou hold his hand up and then squashed it on the professorial mt.

Help Wanted.

Mary Jane Cytchfield, '42 is tired of school. Desires a fairly good looking man with a little money for a husband. Claims to be very attractive, 5 feet one, has blonde hair, blue eyes. Room number in directory.

New Record

Hughie Williams' Monday eight o'clock class almost missed Hugh's pipe of the year. It was 8:12 and the class was about ready to walk out when in strode on hero stamping his feet. "I'd have been here sooner, but I got stuck. Because I got stuck, my feet are wet. Because I've got wet feet, there'll be no class." And Hughie was through the door before the class could move. Williams' time from entrance to exit—15 seconds flat.

Things I Haven't Mentioned

Built Willis, worthy du, and one Connie Smith of the kappa shack in various and sundry places.

We don't believe it but X-57 says Flo Kilgore innocently asked if there was to be a lab in the proposed marriage course. Bill Engel has decorated Eloise Rockwell with the taxi jewelry Eleanor Binfor pinned by someone I'm told, as if it matters much.
