Lion Cagers Top Maryland In Opener, 42-28

Height Is Big Factor In Victory

By BOB WILSON

John Lawther's theory that "Height Makes The Basketball Team" was decisively proven Saturday night when Penn State's towering Lions launched their 23-game 1938-'39 cage season with a top-sided 42-28 victory over Maryland's clever Terapin five.

The game climaxed Penn State's second annual basketball clinic which more than 700 players, coaches and officials attended.

After a nip-and-tuck, give-and-take first half ended with State holding a slim 15-12 lead, Lawther's lanky Lions cascaded into furious basketball action in the second half to score 27 points in a landslide that was the major feature of the Terapin rout.

Regged Play In Spots

Characteristic of early season ball, the play of both teams was ragged in spots. State's offensive attack was shabbier than is ordinary for a team. The Nittanymen tried 31 goals from the field in the first half but sank only six for an average of 19 percent. This average jumped to 34 percent in the second period when 10 buckets out of 29 tries were made.

A particularly penetrating Maryland defense compensated for this poor offensive attack.

Maryland made the mistake of high passing against players considerably taller than themselves. Time after time the fast-breaking offensive thrusts of the Terps failed when State intercepted their high passes.

McWilliams Tops Scoring

Cliff McWilliams, junior guard, looked particularly good considering that this was his first starting assignment. McWilliams topped State's scoring with four goals from the field and as many fouls for 12 points.

In his varsity debut, sophomore Johnny Bair played fairly good ball—especially on the defense. Big Jim Richardson, who never played high school basketball, amazed visiting critics with his sparkling play. Although far from a finished cager, Richardson is definitely an offensive threat and a good defensive man.

Surprise package No. 1 was Norm Racusin, another sophomore, whose brilliant basketreering was responsible for seven Lion points. Racusin showed plenty of "stuff" for the short time that he played. If he continues to improve, Big Bill Stopper may find himself playing second fiddle to the center post.

Lawther used George Chalmers, senior letterman, to steady the shaky Lion quintet when the going got tough.

Sadly lacking was the usual reliability of the "Big Three"—veterans Max Corbin, Charley Prosser and Bill Stopper. None played up-to-snuff ball although Prosser jumped in four double-deckers and a pair of fouls for 10 points.

Only in the free-throw department did Lawther's tossers look at all outstanding. The Nittanymen made 10 out of 12 fouls for the exceptional average of 83 percent. McWilliams made four out of five, Prosser and Bair two out of two, Racusin one out of two and Moffatt one.

Maryland, every bit as warm as they were warmly dressed (long stockings with shirt sleeves to match), depended on the steady play of Capt. George Knepley, All-Southern Conference guard last year, and Adam Bengoeshea, clever forward, to bear the brunt of their attack.

15 Cub Basketeers Intensify Practice

Fifteen freshman basketeer aspirants are intensifying daily drills as Coach Nick Thiel prepares to select his first-string cub team this week.

Battling it out for positions are Howard Smith, Henry White, Bill Kelley, Francis Farris, Elmer Gross, Martin Sonnenfeld, Hal High, Bill Ziegenfuss, Don Cassidy, Bill Gollam, Joe Jones, Hal Hoy, and John Beyer.

Wanted--Mat Heavyweights

By GEORGE SCHLESS

"Heavy weight, heavy weight—who has a heavy weight?" That time, chanted in slow, dignified style, is musicmaster Charles Spindel's theme song these days.

Last year the Lion wrestlers tied with Lehigh and lost to Princeton, all because of the lack of a big man in the final bout.

Backman Back In Shape

There are a few bright spots, however, that help to relieve Charles' gloom. Captain Don Backman, invincible in the 165 pound class last year, but forced out in the middle of the season by a knee injury, is back in his old shape and ready to go.

Another ray of sunshine is "Jit-Sit Joe" Scalzo last year's freshman sensation who may be used at either 145 or 155.

Mit Association Increases Weights In Lower Classes

By BERNIE NEWMAN

At long last, it has been approved! The 115 and 125 pound divisions of intercollegiate boxing, for many years problematic to college coaches, have been revised at the recent meeting of the Eastern Intercollegiate Boxing Association.

With statistics proving that college students are bigger and heavier today than in the past and cries coming from the fighters themselves of the difficult task in training down below 118 pounds, it has finally been granted that the weight officially be changed to 120 pounds.

The 125-pounders were gifted with two pounds when it was found that only a five-pound difference would exist between the two lighter divisions, thus the official count will go at 127.

The other divisions will remain the same—135, 145, 155, 165, 175, and heavy—except that the boxer's must come in on the nose.

Another interesting change comes under the knock-down heading. It has been decided that any fighter knocked down must remain on the canvas for the count of nine before being allowed to resume warfare.

The use of bandages around the knuckles or between the fingers has been restricted except above the knuckle-line.

This is the story of Suzanne, for whom a whole new life began that evening in June when a young stranger tied his horse in front of her father's log cabin.
