STEP TOWARD COOPERATION

After eleven months of bickering with the College Senate on the question of a mid-year vacato commend the Senate for its actions at its meeting last Thursday

For the Senate heard three student leaders, who presented the petition of the student body for a mid-yea, recess. And after discussing the matter with the students, the group decided to refer it to two committees — Calendar and Academic Standards—who are to give a report in the near tuture as to the effects the adoption of a mid-year vacation would have on future calendars

In assigning the problem to the Academic Standards group for discussion along with such suggestions as lengthening of final examinations period, the Senate shower that it is giving the mid-year vacation proposal the serious considciation it is worth but had heretofore been de-

And, in deciding how to inform the student spokesmen as to what action had been taken or then petition, the Senate was careful to avoid saying that the petition had been voted down, but rather instructed the secretary to inform the students that the whole matter had been referred to the two committees for study in connection with the construction of future calendars

These signs that the Senate has started to take a co-operative attitude in dealing with stu-dent-suggester measures are in pleasant contrast with the dogmatic manner in which the Calendar Committee and the Senate as a whole turned down the vacation proposal in January, failing to give any reason for their action

WHILE THE PRESENT attitude of the Senate as a whole is indicative of new interest in the po sib lities of a mid-year vacation, it is not clear whether er not it is still considering the possibilit es of such action in the 1939-40 calendar

The Collegian sincerely believes that it is not too late to picvide for a mid-year vacation for next year, even though a culendar for the year has already been approved by the Calendar Com-

As proof of its belief that a change in schedule can be made after the calendar has been adopted without making to unnecessary hardships for e ther faculty or students, the Collegian points out that on November 4, 1937, the Senate granted a Thankegiving recess to begin three weeks later, in November 24. This vacation was granted after the presentation of a petition signed by 3,800

If the Senate could grant a special vacation on dent petition, surely a favorable report from the attees now investigating the matter should 1939-40, for there is ample time to make any changes in teaching schedules that such a move changes in week _ would necessitate.

IN COMMENDING the co-operative attitude shown by the Senate at its last meeting, the Collegian sincerely hopes that when the group takes up the proposal of student representation to the Senate, it will do so from the same fair, broadminded point of view

The Senate has obviously come to realize that open expression of student opinion is necessar to the proper functioning of so complex an organization as the College.

Because of the fine work of Joseph A. Peel, Raymond S Coskery, and Walter A. Jones in handling the student petition for a mid-year vacation by presenting it orally, the Senate has come to realize that the student body can capably and maturely represent itself before a faculty body

As long as the Senate keeps these two facts in mind and endeavors to co-operate with students and student leaders, the Collegian is thoroughly convinced that student-Senate quarrels are, a thing of the past.

But only through complete co-operation on both sides can satisfactory student-faculty-administration relationships be maintained. And satisfacstudent-faculty-administration relationships are vital to a greater Penn State .- G.B S.
