Petrella's Running Features; Nittanymen Point For Penn

By DICK PETERS
With one eye focussed on Franklin Field and next Saturday's traditional battle with the University of Pennsylvania Quakers, the Nittany Lion eleven kept the other eye sufficiently focussed on an obstinate Maryland Terrapin Saturday afternoon and were thus able to send the Southerners back to College Park on the short end of the score, 12-0.

Penn-Penn State Luncheon Slated This Weekend

Student Leaders Convene Saturday; Will Discuss Better Student Relations

Plans for the luncheon of student leaders from Penn State and the University of Pennsylvania were developing rapidly as campus organizations from both colleges combined efforts to foster more friendly relationships.

The luncheon is scheduled for Houston Hall on the Penn campus at 12:30 p. m. next Saturday.

While no definite program has been decided upon, it was indicated that the gathering would be an informal general discussion. Plans for avoiding student riots following the game will be outlined.

Additional steps toward preventing unnecessary rioting after the game have already been undertaken and the meeting of student leaders will aid in carrying out such tactics.

Student leaders here who plan to be in Philadelphia for the game have been urged by All-College President H. Clifton McWilliams to attend the affair.

Both men and women may go to the luncheon which will not last more than 45 minutes. Everyone then will leave for Franklin Field.

Tickets for the luncheon at 50 cents per person are now available at Student Union desk or with various student leaders.

Portfolio Gains Official Status

Portfolio has officially taken its place as Penn State's undergraduate literary publication.

The magazine gained this status when its position for recognition was favorably acted upon by the Student Welfare Committee at its meeting last week.

Editor Jean C. Craighead, '41, revealed that the magazine, published for the first time in September, sold out its complete first issue and obtained more than enough subscribers to insure its publication for the entire year.

As the first of a group of guest speakers, Portfolio had Bernard O'Donnell, promoter for Harper's Magazine, address a group of student and faculty members in Old Main Sandwich shop, yesterday.

Dr. Struck Gives Address

Dr. F. Theodore Struck, professor of industrial education, spoke on the topic "Builders of American Democracy" before the industrial education section of the Maryland State Teachers' Association at Baltimore last weekend.

'Soph Flop' Days Gone Forever, Aver Chairmen

It's not news that Hal Kemp and his orchestra are only 17 days away from their Soph Hop engagement here on Friday, November 24 the eve of the Pitt football game.

But it is news that Co-Chairmen William J. McKnight '42 and Henry I. Levy '42 are expecting a dance that, for a change, won't be "Soph Flop."

There's no money in the till yet but the chairmen are expecting more than enough at $3.85 a couple to take care of their $2,300 budget by the time November 24th is over.

The co-chairmen—who really are on the spot this year—were nearly bubbling over as they looked back on the results of houseparty, week-end, saw that some students had some money left and that a lot more students had Soph Hop dates.

It begins to look as though the

FAMED VIOLINIST

Fritz Kreisler Signs For Artists' Course

Fritz Kreisler, world-famous violinist, will appear here as the third artist on the Artists' Course series, March 7, it was announced yesterday by Dr. Carl E. Marquardt, chairman of the Artists' Course committee.

Dr. Marquardt also announced that tickets for this year's series will be the same price as last year.

Recognized as one of the greatest violin masters of the present day, Kreisler will be the highest paid artist ever to appear in Central Pennsylvania. Born in Vienna, he became interested in the violin at about the same time he began to talk and at the age of seven had already appeared in a concert.

In Paris, Kreisler studied under the celebrated Massini and Dalibes, who were mystified at the ability of the ten-year-old.

Kreisler began his first professional tour at the age of fourteen and since that time has risen to the position of one of the truly great string artists of all times.

Only once, in all those years, did Kreisler give up, that to study for the medical profession, but the love of his violin drew the maestro back to his real life's work.

In the announcement of Kreisler's appearance, Dr. Marquardt pointed out that though only four numbers appear in the series this year, the quality of the artists is so much higher than in the past that success from a cultural standpoint is already insured.

Students Will Decide On Lion Shrine

Cabinet Skys Plan Pending Collegian Poll

Whether or not Penn State will have a shrine will be determined by the students, following the positive action taken by the All-College Cabinet at the last meeting.

On a suggestion by Bernard A. Newman '40, the Cabinet approved the plan, but refused to make a final decision until student opinion could be obtained.

Within a few weeks the Collegian will conduct a survey on the desirability of the establishment of a shrine. The results of that survey will be very instrumental in the Cabinet's final decision.

According to the proposed plan, two bronze Nittany Lions would be erected on some favorable location on the campus. The Lions would be erected on a concrete and steel base and would become a traditional location on this campus.

It is probable that the College would approve the necessary financial support for the undertaking should the students feel that the shrine would aid in building tradition and spirit on this campus.

'Yegg' Discovers World Cruel To College Heroes

Appearing in many newspapers last week was a small, insignificant story of a former college student named Elgie W. Tobin who was charged with manslaughter in the hit-and-run death of Isador Meoy, 53-year-old laborer.

According to the newspapers, Tobin's auto, with the radiator badly smashed, was found near the scene of the accident. Tobin was identified by one John Harcha who said he saw Tobin get into the car and drive away after saying he would report the accident to the Ecorse, Mich. police.

On the surface, it seemed that it was just the story of another former college student who had gotten into trouble. But the record books tell an entirely different story.

Back in 1914 when the first World War had been going on at a terrific clip for three months, and football here at Penn State was overshadowing the conflict abroad, the students were celebrating a 13-13 moral victory over Harvard.

In the field behind the Armory the football enthusiasts had gathered a huge pile of wood. Suddenly the giant pile of debris burst into flame with a terrific explosion, and the football captain was rushed to the hospital suffering from severe burns.

The captain, who was nicknamed "Yegg," was also a member of the soccer, basketball, and baseball teams. The 1915 LaVie said of "Yegg," "He would never say die, and he unselfishly devoted himself to American citizenship in the classroom."

Today, in real life, "Yegg" is Elgie W. Tobin.
