M. I. MINING MURAL

Pictured here is one of the three murals in the walls of the rotunda and lobby of the Mineral Industries building. The murals, the only ones on Campus, are the work of Edmund M. Ashe, prominent Pittsburgh artist, and were presented to the College by an Alumni committee.

The mural reproduced here shows coal miners changing shift, just as they leave the elevator cage. All three are Pennsylvania industrial scenes.

Refugee Flees Germany To Study At Penn State

Safe in the United States, far from Nazi terrorists and scenes of strife and stifling prejudice, Bruno Eisen, Czechoslovakian refugee student, can look back on his life in Nazi Germany as a hideous, yet authentic nightmare.

Less than a year ago, Bruno was a pre-medical student at Charles University in Prague. Then came Hitler's invasion of Czechoslovakia and the end of Bruno's college days in Europe. Study in Prague or anywhere in Germany was impossible so Bruno applied for and received a student's visa to enter the United States for study.

After weeks of waiting, Bruno embarked on the German liner Hansa from Hamburg on August 24. Three days later the Hansa was returned to Hamburg because of the outbreak of war. He was given 72 hours to leave Germany or be sent to a concentration camp.

Hurriedly writing an uncle in America, Bruno received the necessary passage money and "escaped" into Holland only hours before the deadline. Three weeks later Bruno entered Penn State as a forestry student. "Too many doctors in America," sums up Bruno's change in courses from pre-med to forestry.

A Gamma Sigma Phi pledge, Bruno daily finds new wonders to amaze him at Penn State. Noticing revived interest in knitting, he expressed the desire to be introduced to "some nice girl who might knit me a sweater." (His size is 40, in case some nice girl is interested.)

Endowed Schools In Danger, Says Chicago President

The endowed universities in this country will have to go out of business, Dr. Robert Maynard Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, declares today in The Saturday Evening Post "unless they face their financial situation frankly, set their house in order, develop a clear and defensible idea of what they are trying to do and make the public understand it."

The position of the endowed universities, he points out, is precarious because of the economic situation and the low interest yield on investments while the institutions supported by taxation are continuing their advance on all fronts.

Endowed universities, he says, might as well forget their endowments as the future of these funds is so speculative that no program can be based upon them. As a result of "going through the wringer" of economy from 1931 to 1935 it is unlikely that expenses can be cut much more, the article says.

Consolidation Advocated

Consolidation of institutions is advocated as one possible step, while Dr. Hutchins also suggests that smaller annual contributions might well be built up to take the place of a few large endowments, or that in some cases it may be necessary to use capital, instead of relying on interest, because it would be a wiser investment to meet the need of the generation of youths now pressing for education than to try to conserve assets for an unpredictable future.

Historical Society Will Hold Annual Convention Here

The College, itself a storehouse of much historical information concerning the Commonwealth, will play host to next year's annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Historical Association.

The selection of Penn State as the site was made at the 1939 meeting held recently at Bethlehem. Dr. J. Paul Selsam, assistant professor of history, was re-elected secretary of the organization. Seven other members of the College's history faculty are active in the association, one of them, Professor W. F. Dunaway, being a member of the executive committee.

The state association has more than 500 active members, including a large number of college history instructors. An entire collection of books in the College library is devoted to Pennsylvania history.

RUMOR FACTORY

Dick Harlow '14, head coach of football at Harvard, last week denied that he was planning to leave Harvard at the end of this season. "I am not negotiating with any other institutions and I shall coach at Harvard next year," he said.

No college administration wants Dr. John Bahr (Jock) Sutherland as a football coach these days, it is said. After his show-down with Chancellor Bowman at Pitt when it became a question of either the Chancellor or the Coach leaving, no college president is ready to take a chance on him.

Over-emphasis of character-building at the University of Chicago and a few plenty to 0 licksings have started a move to oust the University of Chicago from the Big Ten.

Fraternities here were passing around the rumor last week that Coach Carl Snavey will leave Cornell this year. According to the Story Snavey believes in quitting one job when his reputation is sky-high and going somewhere else to sign a new long-term contract at the best price his soaring stock can command.

Frank N. Wolf head coach of football and athletic director at Waynesburg College, is reported non-committal on a rumor that he will get some sort of a football coaching position at Penn State next year. Wolf, a State graduate, has earned a reputation at Waynesburg as one of the nation's leading small college coaches and is noted for an ability to produce good teams with comparatively poor material.

Schott To Address Alumni

Dr. Carl P. Schott, dean of the school of physical education and athletics, will address a smoker to be held in Lancaster next Thursday night by the Lancaster County Alumni Club.

Liquor Sales Opposed By Students, Survey Shows

A bare majority of students here oppose the sale of liquor in State College, according to a recent cross-section survey.

Of those interviewed 56.9 percent said "no" to the question, "Do you approve of the sale of alcoholic beverages other than beer in State College?" Those who answered "yes" constituted 43.1 percent.

A total of 216 undergraduates were reached by the poll, including 54 fraternity men and women and 162 non-fraternity men and women.

A slight majority in favor of liquor sales was registered by fraternity men and women, 55.6 percent of whom supported the proposal. Strongly opposed was the non-fraternity group, only 38.9 percent of which voted for alcoholic beverages other than beer.

Also revealed by the survey was the even division of the student body into drinkers and non-drinkers. Of the 216, 109 said they drank alcoholic beverages, while 107 professed to abstain.

Some of those contacted believed that liquor should be sold in State College if it were not sold in a barroom, that is, it should be sold at state liquor stores.

Ward Scholarships Won By Students

Ten students have drawn a total of $446 this semester from the Montgomery Ward Scholarship Fund, College auditor James A. Hanley, newly appointed controller of the Montgomery Ward Scholarship Fund, revealed yesterday.

According to the plan of the mail order house, students receive a commission on all orders using special order blanks stamped with the student's name. This plan is no longer open to applicants.

Hanley succeeds Professor William V. Dennis, department of agricultural economics, as counselor for the fund.

Student ROTC Staff Named

52 Seniors And 95 Juniors Appointed By Col. Emery

Fifty-two seniors and 94 juniors have been appointed cadet officers in the ROTC, it was announced yesterday, with Cadet Col. Arthur M. Skibbe '40 in charge of the student brigade.

This number is 42 more than last year, Colonel Ambrose B. Emery, head of the military department, said yesterday.

Cadet Lieutenant Colonels appointed are Leonard S. Wilhelm '40, M. Gilbert Radcliff '40, and Grover C. Washbaugh '40 who is infantry executive officer.

Cadet Majors named are Walton L. Turner '40, infantry brigade adjutant; B. Paul Blasingame '40, engineer brigade plan and training officer; Robert F. Blumenstein '40, Robert W. Green '40, Bruce G. Ortell '40, Charles M. Parkins '40, and Albro L. Parsons '40.

Also named were 41 seniors as cadet captains and 94 juniors as cadet second lieutenants.

Forestry Societies Hold Joint Meeting

For the first time Xi Sigma Phi, honorary forestry fraternity, and the Penn State Forestry Society will hold a joint meeting open to the public. The meeting will be held this Thursday at 8 p. m. in room 110 Home Economics Building.

H. O. Kimmel, State Coordinator of the Soil Conservation Service, will speak followed by V. C. Miles, Area Forester for Western Pennsylvania of the Soil Conservation Service. A sound motion picture entitled "30 Years of Logging" will conclude the meeting.

Rutgers University has a new course in the organization of public relief.
