Bortz Manhandles Lehr In 7th Bout To Knot Score At 10 1-2 All; Elliott And Brenneman Grapple To Extra-Stanza Deadlock To End EIWA Preview

Penn State and Lehigh, the East's two best wrestling teams, fought, clawed, and saw-sawed to a 12-12 deadlock before an overflow crowd of 3,000 mat fanatics who scaled the rafters and hung from the balcony of Taylor Gym, Lehigh "sweat box," to witness grappling as it should, and should not be.

The Brown and White warriors leaped to a 6-0 lead by winning decisions in the 121 and 128-pound contests, but Lion Frank Gleason grabbed the 136-pound clash when he battled for seven minutes to throw Al Lee with a figure four and scissors, but the Engineer refused to be thrown as he displayed an amazing amount of stamina.

Varsity Tilt Is Landslide For Owl Foe

Small Scores 2 Firsts; Frosh Finish Undelected

By DICK PETERS

Proving again to be one of the most powerful freshman athletic teams ever to represent the Nittany Lion, Gene Weststone's yearling gymnasts made a walk-away of what had been predicted a close match, when they hurled the Temple frosh 40-14 and thus ended the first official freshman gymnastic schedule undefeated.

Prior to the Cub meet, the "forgotten men," the Lion varsity, bowed to Temple's eastern intercollegiate champions, 42-14. Offering little competition in all but the rope-climbing event and high bar competition, the varsity lads could not cope with the efforts of the Danser brothers and Norm Boardman who paced the Owls to a decisive victory.

Leading freshman scorer was Sol Small, who notched up first spots in the rings and side-horse competition. Lou Bordo and Johnny Wolf added to the Cub cause with seconds and thirds in several events.

The matches were close throughout. Only one bout, in the sabre duels, ended in complete defeat for the loser. In the next to last match Elmer Lerner of Rutgers defeated Nittanyman Ed Zarger, 5-0.
