SUFFRAGETTE—1940

WHEN CONGRESS paved the way for woman suffrage back in 1920 it visualized a cleansing and stabilizing effect on elections because of the female votes it was creating.

National elections do not differ in principlc from women's student government elections. In fact, a strong point of similarity is the apathy with which women go to the polls.

In an era, such as our own, when the female vote is vital enough to swing the right leaders into office, women are ignoring their power.

Why, we ask, should this be so? Ask yourself these questions:

What place should Penn State women occupy in student affairs? What trends now in progress make it inevitable that women here should choose leaders able to grow with these changes and aid them to reality?

Since WSGA has swung away from the uni-purpose of making rules and is now engaged in teaching, direction of activities, and planning of social affairs, can you not visualize women with the business efficiency and originality to fill the posts?

Are you unwilling to choose a woman for her intrinsic worth and overlook sorority tie-ups?

Do you want to be categorized with women you had no voice in electing?

Could you disregard personal antagonisms and go to the polls knowing that there are some women whose absence in office would deter the coeds' progress?

When you cast your vote, one week from today, you will have an opportunity to answer these questions

Remember that this is a democracy and Penn State women are gaining an unprecedented place in College affairs. You are judged by your leaders, and there may be a better person for the job, even if she is not a sorority sister.

In a day when suffrage is the most precious possession a person can have-show that you appreciate your right to vote

Your vote may be the deciding factor-USE IT V. L K.

REVIEWING RUSHING

SORORITY RUSHING chairmen and the captains of house pledge groups will meet this afternoon to make suggestions for next year's rushing code. A similar group meets every year and every year there are loud cries-pro and con-on the rushing code

Provisions for only five planned parties during formal rushing and the establishment of a Panhellenic post office, are steps in the right direction. These innovations are destined to last, for they give sorolity women an opportunity to find which rushees are in terested in the houses and which should be dropped.

Perhaps the outstanding fault that can he found in this year's code is the strained relationship between sorority women and freshmen that existed all first semester.

Instead of having a natural relationship where upperclasswomen and freshmen were placed on an equal plane, new women were deprived of the opportunity of mingling with sorority women and consequently did not have the advantage of any advice or help the upperclass women might give

Natural association has been objected to on the grounds that upperclasswomen take advantage of it by camping in freshmen rooms and making nuisances of themselves. While this may be true during the first few weeks of school, the novelty soon wears off and both the solority women and the new students are left on a fairly equal, friendly basis

No freshman enjoys attending a get-together or open house where she knows a few of the women. And yet, this year, first semester rushing was entirely dependent on the open houses, get-togethers, and chapel dates.

Limited contact between sorority women and prospective rushees makes for stiff and forced relationships between the two.

There is no reason why sorority women should build a wall around themselves for a whole semester and then in ten days try to break it down and assume an entirely dif-

OLD MANIA

A Maniacal Note:

Bowed by the weight of a weekend date You type and type as the hour grows late: Week in, week out, you laugh at my stuff And just get sleepy, as I, get gruff . . . But this is your week . . . your week to leap! You write the column, I'm going to sleep. This is your day, not my day ... Take it away, my Girl Friday!

Friday Enters:

You speak of those hours I sit and type flave you forgotten those I sit and gripe As you chat with your friends over the phone Awaiting the muse that gives you your volume To move you to write the weekly colyum This is my day, not your day Who says I'm your Gul Friday

My fingers stumble, my eyes grow bleary. To cheer me up you call me Deary
Your spelling kills Webster, it even kills me
As I grimly hunt that long lost key. You run words together, the names are wrong You laugh at my friends . . . then ask for a song This is my day, not your day . . . So . . I'm still your Girl Friday?

This is my week . my week to leap So go on dailing and enjoy your sleep Ill call on the betas and beta rhos And find me a couple of new Crusoes I'll keep them in chopped steaks, coffee

Anything they want in the Corner Unusual This is my day, not your day . . . Still call me Gill Friday!

I have the pick of the campus . . . you'll see . . Each night it'll be a bigger BMOC Afternoons over cokes, nights in the movies... So you didn't know I could date the smoothies? Go on Crusce, tear your hair and weep This is my week . . . my week to leap! This is my day, not your day . . . And you dare call me Friday!

I'll call them now, all fi aternity row And wire home to Mother to send the dough I'll brush off my clothes, polish my shoes Learn all of Emily's etiquette DOs

Make airangements with all the Five and Tins For an extra supply of those sweetheart pins This is my day, not your day. They too can call me Friday'

There's Anderson, Byrom, Smith and Carter .. Sypherd, Dean, Pennington and Cooper Berkaw, Couch, Altman, Clark and Elliott As I garly leaf through the Greek alphabet their hearts are pinned on another's sweat

Well. I can still dig a pretty mean cellar! This is my day,—not your day Remember me I'm Friday!

Arrows . their collars, Esquite their clothes English not filled with dise and dose .

No more loud ties with socks louder still,
A voice that is dulcet not loud and shrill These are the men I'll date this week
While you sit home all alone and weep This is my day,—not your day See if another will play Girl Friday

My bureau will stagger with pictures galore; The walls will be lined with more . . . and more My dairy I'll fill with entries sweet. 'Til posterity won't find in it one empty sheet. I'll whisper sweet nothings under the moon, And turn off the lights in the living room. This is my day, my one day When I refuse to be your Girl Friday
