

Flight Instructor Reported Better Month After Crash

Sherman Lutz, Civil Aeronautics Authority flight instructor for the College, injured in a plane crash on August 7 is continuing "slow but steady" improvement in the Centre County Hospital, Bellefonte, it has been learned from his physicians.

Charles Neyhart, State College High School student injured with his instructor, is in a very satisfactory condition at the institution.

Still suffering from a brain concussion and numerous fractures, Lutz has his "good and bad days," as far as pain is concerned.

Except for the concussion and fractures, most of his other injuries are nearly healed.

The accident occurred about 10:30 in the morning as Lutz and Neyhart were testing a plane that had just been received the day before, an Aeronca tandem model.

The cause of the crash has not been determined but it is believed that the controls stuck, forcing the plane into a dive not far from the Centre Hills Country Club.

Old Collegian Used 150 Tons of Paper Yearly

Two hundred pounds of paper from Jonquierre, Quebec were used in printing each issue of the bi-weekly Collegian. In the course of a year, 100 pounds of ink from Philadelphia were used printing the student publication.

Last year, 150 tons of paper, 800 pounds of ink, and six tons of metal were used in printing the Collegian and the Centre Daily Times.

The paper is purchased by carloads weighing 30 tons each five times a year. In an eight-page roll there are 1,000 pounds of paper and in the four-page rolls, half as much.

Student Union Is Activities Hub

The hub of all the extra-curricular activities at Penn State—that's the Student Union.

Endeavoring to serve as a coordinating agency for all activities on the campus, the Union has proven itself to be an invaluable student organization since its inception in 1930.

Performing its work through the media of recommendations to its component groups, the Student Union is not supervisory and has no legislative power. Representatives from each of the major activities comprise the membership of the Union Board, although every student engaging in activities is automatically a member.

In its eight-year history, the Union has undertaken and completed many projects which could not be properly handled by individual groups.

Boro Passes Resolution For Retiring Leader

Evidence that the first All-College student government successfully carried on borough-student relations last year was presented at the Class day exercises, June 9. At that time, H. Clifton McWilliams '40, retiring All-College president, received from the State

H. CLIFTON McWILLIAMS Jr. '40 College borough council a resolution of congratulation on his services in offices.

The presentation was made by Arnold C. Laich '41, new All-College president, who served last year as student representative to the borough.

The text follows: "Whereas, there is a common interest among students, residents and the Borough Council of State College in striving to build up a model town, and

"Whereas, complete cooperation in accomplishing this is our common objective, and

"Whereas, H. Clifton McWilliams, the first All-College president of the Pennsylvania State College Student Government Association, has set a very high standard of cooperative effort,

"Be it resolved, that the Council of the Borough of State College extend to Mr. McWilliams his hearty congratulations for his splendid services in the past year.

Daily Collegian Will Choose Queen

$2.50 a year and $1.50 a semester. Mail rates are $3.25 and $2.00 a semester.

Collegian also is making a special combination offer in which both parents and student can subscribe for $5.50 a year. One paper will be mailed home and the other will be delivered to the student in State College. These orders are being received now by mail. It is not necessary for the student to know his State College address as this can be filed at the Collegian office in Old Main on his arrival and can be changed at any time.

One of the queens will represent the freshman class. Candidates will be selected by leering Collegian casanovas at the welcome mass meeting in Schwab Auditorium next Wednesday evening. Would-be queens are urged to look their prettiest.

The other queens, to be selected later, will be chosen from the sorority and from the dormitory group with the highest percentage of Collegian subscribers.

After the three queens are chosen, a final selection of the 1940 Collegian Queen will be made at the Collegian Dance on October 11. She will reign there with the two other queens as her attendants.

Collegian subscribers in State College will have their papers delivered to them before breakfast with delivery to rooms in all fraternities and dormitories assured after October 1.

In all, Collegian will issue 150 papers during the year with copies appearing five mornings a week, Tuesday through Saturday.

Two Subscriptions Come From Hawaii, Puerto Rico

Collegian's subscription drive doesn't begin until next Thursday but it already has two subscriptions of which it is proud, one from Puerto Rico and another from Hawaii.

Both subscribers mailed their orders to Collegian two weeks ago and explained that, since they are going to be away from Penn State, they will need Collegian to keep pace with it.

The subscribers are Horatio C. Ray, Santurce, Puerto Rico, and Jean M. Womer '42, Honolulu, Hawaii.

M.I. School Has 'Treasure House' Of Precious Gems

A veritable "treasure house" of precious and semi-precious gems has been assembled by the School of Mineral Industries for use in teaching students how to evaluate and identify precious jewels—and to guard against misrepresentation.

Diamonds, sapphires, emeralds, and rubies are among the best known precious jewels in the collection, which includes both cut and uncut materials representing about 75 different species and varieties of gems. Semi-precious exhibits include opals, peridots, tourmalines, spinels, and various silica minerals. There are also replicas of the famous diamonds of the world.

Used in a new cultural course introduced this year, the gems are examined from both an ornamental and an industrial viewpoint, and are compared in historical importance and relative value. Colors, cutting designs, and other features are demonstrated in the laboratory.

So that students may guard against deception in purchasing gems, they are required to perform tests on various gems to establish their true identity and value. Professor's Arthur P. Honess and William M. Myers, who are in charge of the course, feel that students will be better able to judge the superficial appearance of stones if they know their physical background.

Men students have enrolled in the course in greater number than women students, but a growing enrollment of coeds is expected in view of the inherent feminine interest in jewelry.

Daily Collegian Moves Into New Quarters

Facilities of the Collegian have been expanded over the summer in order to handle the additional activity which daily publication will incur.

Collegian offices as before will be maintained in Room 313, Old Main, and these offices will be open daily during the College year. Business offices and a night editorial office will be maintained in the new Centre Daily Times building at 119-121 South Frazier street. Both offices can be reached by telephone.

The new modern Times building was erected over the summer to replace the cramped and antiquated offices it had occupied at 110 West College avenue.

Collegians subscriptions, all business matters, and all editorial matters will be handled at the Old Main office.

Tulane University engineering students have constructed a working model of the spillway of the $12,000,000 Conchas dam.
