

Two Coeds Attend Golf Sports Day

Attending the Golf Sports Day sponsored by the University of Pennsylvania at the Philadelphia Cricket Club on Saturday were Janet L. Fleming '42 and Dorothy M. Pearce '41, accompanied by Miss Marie Haidt, head of the women's physical education department.

Miss Fleming placed second in the medal play tournament, with a score of 89 while Jane Cassidy, of New York University, carded an 84 to cop first place.

About 20 women participated in the sports day, representing Beaver, Chestnut Hill, Goucher, New York University, Penn State, Swarthmore, Temple, Pennsylvania, and West Chester State Teachers College.

Miss Haidt was called upon at the luncheon that followed to discuss the Sports Day which WRA sponsored here last May. The purpose of both these sports days was to encourage friendly athletic relationships among the colleges, and not to stimulate intercollegiate competition.

We, The Women—

Dad Praises Daughter's Advantages In College

DEAR DAUGHTER;

Dad's Day was even better than I dared hope it would be. You all deserve our heartiest congratulations.

Somehow we at home didn't realize you get so much more from a college education than book learning. It wasn't until last weekend, when we saw how efficiently you organize activities, plan with others and learn to fit yourselves for your life in future communities of our country that we gave the matter much thought.

And the facilities you have at your disposal, daughter! They were beyond our wildest hopes as adolescents. We hope you realize your opportunities and make use of them.

Really, daughter, have you stopped to analyze just what you can get from your present experiences? You are not only schooled in the course you have chosen but are also growing intellectually, morally and socially.

You are on your own. It is up to you just how much you get from your college life. Away from home, you are in contact with people, the majority of whom you never knew before. It is your responsibility to learn to live with them, learn consideration for them and solve your problems by yourself.

It is this training that prepares you for life in a democratic community. It can only happen once in your life—in college. And we're glad you chose Penn State to educate you for this fruitful experience.

AFFECTIONATELY,
DAD
—J.C.S.

Joe College Views Women's Clothing

A man's opinion of the coed's wardrobe is considered so important that various shops this year invited college men to preview campus attires throughout the country.

Ultra-collegiate outfits were viewed with approval but the men candidly claimed "some girls just can't wear sports clothes."

One BMOC praised sweaters in natural shades and okayed the white shirt which is becoming tops. However, high wedgies are taboo on campus because they're termed too "clumsy."

Unanimous approval was given to white and all-black evening dresses but the conservative men shied away from red velvet saying it was "nice but a bit flashy."

Plaids and tweeds took first place in masculine admiration. College women agreed on that point but they all seemed to have a place in their hearts for the red velvet.

Chapel Comments—Dr. Kingdon Advises Father, Son Discussions

The Dads' Day chapel service in Rec Hall Sunday featured an address by Dr. Frank Kingdon on "The Resources of Our Faith."

Dr. Kingdon advised every father and son to sit down and discuss the question of what is the most important thing in the world. He discounted both money and fame as being most important, but stressed the importance of personal integrity. "The real person," he said, "is the man that has found something greater than himself to live for."

Stressing the clash of ideas among college students, Dr. Kingdon expressed the importance of argument. "We argue on everything from politics to the present world crisis," he said, "is the outer expression of what is going on in our minds."

White Hall Equips Coeds For Fall Sports

The potential Robin Hood or Patty Berg needn't be discouraged! White Hall's equipment room can fit the athletic coed for her favorite fall sports.

Archery supplies include 4 portable (and inflammable!) targets, 8 home-made faces for targets, 20 gloves, 20 vari-sizer bows, 17 arm guards, 8 canvas carriers for arrows, and also 7 dozen footed, 2 dozen 28-inch, and 7 dozen new arrows.

About 20 dozen golf balls and 2 dozen indoor cotton balls help the coeds follow through and acquire proper timing.

Hockey players who vie tomorrow with the U. S. touring team find '67 sticks, 69 wooden balls, 26 leather balls, 3 official balls and 44 shin guards to lead them to victory. Goalies have 3 chest pads and one pair of shoes, size 7, to halt scoring attacks.

Education Council Draws Up Budget

A budget, which is to be submitted to the Inter-Class Finance Committee and the All-College cabinet for approval this week, was drawn up by the Education School Council Sunday night.

Peter G. Fetzko '41, announced that the council will concentrate their efforts on building up a highly organized centralized organization comprised of separate clubs and societies in the five departments of the Education school, which are Home Economics, General Education, Industrial Education, Music Education and Nature Education.

Plans were also discussed on how to better and intensify student-faculty relationships.

The council will soon complete plans for a series of student-faculty mixers to be held throughout the year. All Education students and faculty are urged to offer suggestions and criticisms to the council by means of coupons which Student Union will distribute this week.

The Council will meet in the second floor lounge of Old Main, Oct. 13, at 6:15 p. m.

Women's Chem Honorary To Hold Open House

Demonstrations concerning all chemistry activity on campus will be given under the sponsorship of Iota Sigma Pi, women's chemistry honorary, at their informal open house meeting in Grange Dormitory Wednesday evening, October 16.

All women students in the chemistry field are invited to the open house, when those eligible for membership will be selected.

Grooming Tips For Chic Women

A well-dressed woman is judged not alone by what she wears but by how she wears it. Fashion magazines notwithstanding, last year's clothes can look just as smart as the new models with a bit of attention to details and a small amount of proper care.

First essential in good grooming is pressing. Woolens, silks, taffeta and linen should be ironed on the wrong side with a damp (not wet) cloth. Velvet should be turned inside out and steamed. Stubbish pleats may be pressed on the right side, first with a damp cloth and then with a dry one, but never without some protection between the iron and material.

Airing and brushing immediately after wear will lessen the amount of pressing no end.

Sweaters should be aired and folded carefully and placed in a drawer with plenty of space to prevent crushing. They may be laundered as frequently as necessary if blocked with an iron.

Leather and alligator shoes will keep their luster longer if polished often. Scrapes and scratches may be hidden with a dab of iodine or brown shoes or ink on black. Shoe trees are a must and should be placed immediately after wearing.

Dust is better averted than removed from hats and a hatbox is the best precaution. Tissue paper inside the crown and around the brim will preserve the shape of a hat beautifully.

Home Economics Council Has Initial Meeting

Meeting for the first time this year, the Home Economics Advisory Council discussed many issues in Room 223 Home Economics at 8 p. m. last night.

Charlotte A. Lowe '41, was in charge of plans for a suggested home economics "Hospitality Day."

"Does the Education Council still exist? If so, what is our part on it?" was another question the Council attempted to answer.

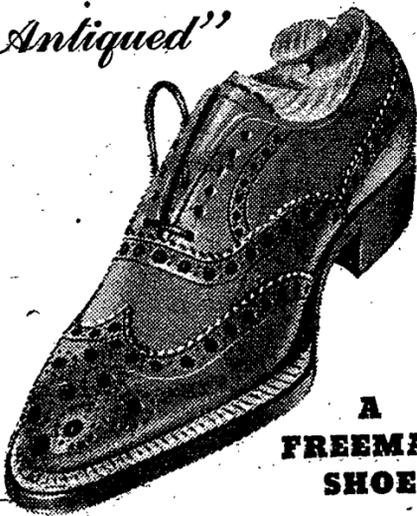

The Council asked for changes in the library, better light, better books, and discussed the request for an additional night for library work.

Estimates of the cost of books, uniforms and material will be sought to be made available to freshman home economics students next year.

Honorary Plans Talks

Clarence O. Williams, associate professor of education, will soon address the freshman women in Women's Building and Mac Hall on study problems. These talks are being planned for the benefit of the freshman coeds by Alpha Lambda Delta, freshman honorary society.
