Ath Hall Coeds Await Hallowe'en

Weird ghost stories, fortune telling, candy, corn and apple contests will provide fun against a background of corn shocks, pumpkins, and fall leaves for costumed Atherton Hall coeds in the four Atherton lounges starting at 10 p.m. tomorrow.

Individual and group prizes will be awarded winners participating in the costume parade scheduled for 11:30 p.m. Three different colored tickets entitling guests to doughnuts, cider, and candy will be issued upon payment of ten cents admission. Proceeds will be used for a scholarship fund sponsored by WSGA Junior Service Board.

All refreshments will be served in the northeast lounge, and bedecked coeds will enter the apple and candy corn contests in the southeast lounge. Fortune telling at two cents a future will be done in the southwest lounge, and ghost stories free of charge will be told in the southeast lounge. Refreshments not included in the admission charge will be two cents each with popcorn balls selling for five cents.

We, The Women— Your Vote Counts On November 5th

BECAUSE one week from today millions of Americans will exercise a power peculiar to democracy— voting —and because the way has been cleared for those of voting age to return home to cast their ballots, we direct these thoughts to the approximately 325 Penn State women who are 21 years old or more. Probably one half that number are registered in various precincts throughout the state. We add to what has already been said and urge them to go to the polls.

We don't care to argue issues for we feel that everyone who has read or listened to a particle of campaign literature or speeches has definitely formulated ideas on the questions which have been disputed since those history-making nights in Philadelphia and Chicago.

But we do argue that never before in the history of democratic states has it been so necessary to cast a ballot—be it for the Democratic, Republican, or other candidates.

Out of this election will come the standards of governing which will be followed by posterity in these United States. Whether they be the same rules, or a new set, will be decided by the outcome of next Tuesday's election.

Never before has it been so important for each person of voting age to use what our ancestors fought for—the power of suffrage. Those 162 votes will help to decide the outcome of American standards of government.
