College Coeds Still Chose Li'l Abners

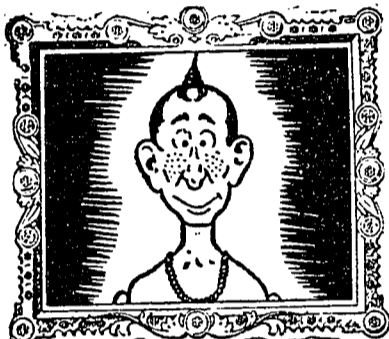

When Sadie Hawkins was 45 and still hadn't bagged a man, her pappy, Heksebiah, rounded up all the eligible bachelors in Dogpatch, fired a gun, and set Sadie loose. Colleges have continued the chase ever since, with the coeds catching their own particular Li'l Abners.

Most colleges observed Sadie Hawkins Day last Saturday, but since this date conflicted with Houseparty, Mortar Board, local agency for backwoods-type romances, set State's big doins' for this Saturday with "Spinster Skip" decorations based on this theme.

A men's fraternity at the University of Arkansas held a day with coeds dressed like Daisy Mae and men like Li'l Abner.

A log cabin front decorated the bandstand with several barrels of apples and turnips, and enlargements of Al Capp's cartoon characters carrying out the theme.

Morris Harvey College combined the event with a football game Saturday, although coeds could start gunning for men at sunrise. Through the day, coeds paid all bills for entertainment. The man-hunting race was held between halves of the game, with Ma'ryin' Sam riding a donkey, and refereeing the spree.

Oklahoma University's chase began at 4 p. m., with the penalty of paying all expenses and being subjected to a soup bowl haircut for any man caught. Men invited anywhere had to go with the coed who asked him. To further celebrate the day, Salomey, the pig, was let loose on campus.

We, The Women

The Blue Band—Houseparty's Hit

SINCE the first football encounter we have wanted to expound our admiration for the Blue Band's snappy formations, and after the houseparty tilt we can hardly control the typewriter keys in dashing off words of praise—stupendous, colossal, gigantic!

The "Let Me Call You Sweetheart" number almost surpassed "Funiculi, Funicula" as a super arrangement, and stole the hearts of 15,000 fans in the bargain. Putting Hum in a uniform after all these years helped, too. After the march arrangements he has worked out we would like to put him on a pedestal.

We swell with pride when the band struts down the field in double quick steps making rival bands look like something which was trying hard to catch up to the leader. Here's to the Blue Band—the best there is anywhere.

FOR A YEAR we have wondered what the animal was they called "lion." When it waddled across Beaver Field after two dogs, we concluded the lion isn't a lion. It's a teddy bear.

CALL IT sour grapes if you will, but we contend that 99 per cent of the imports looked like Coney Island pickups. The other per cent sent "sorry butts."
