

Sorority Parties Reach Peak Today

Biggest open house of the year set for this afternoon from 4 to 5:30 p.m. when sororities put forth their all to wind up this year's series with a bang.

Freshmen and transfers are urged by Panhellenic Council to make the most of their last opportunity to meet the upperclasswomen by attending the parties. New houses may be visited or return calls made, but the half-hour limit for each house is still in force.

"Dutch treat" dating, room visiting, and contact at sports events will be permitted until Christmas recess, but from January 6, the day after vacation, until noon of the first day of second semester, there will be a silent period.

A silent period means that no room visiting will be permitted either by sorority women or freshmen, and no dating contact of any kind will be allowed except greetings.

We, The Women—12 Days 'Til Christmas—10 Days To Study

Only 12 more shopping days until Christmas! All of which means that there are only 10 more studying days until Christmas vacation, 10 days in which to pack a myriad of bluebooks, reports, term papers, outside reading assignments, scrapbooks, and, oh yes, back work.

Why worry now, you say. Finals are too far away to cause any wailing and gnashing of teeth just yet, but a peek into the pessimistic future tells a different tale. Between the end of Christmas vacation, January 6, and the beginning of finals, January 20, there is a scant two weeks, 14 short days.

Remembering the depreciation in learning which sets in over the holidays, that is hardly time to drum a semester's work into our noggin, much less unpack Christmas presents and hash over vacation bits. In short, there won't be a spare minute to clean up back assignments. So now is the time for all students to come to the aid of their averages.

Professors, psychologists, and advisers warn that a week's effort won't make a "1" out of a "-1", but there's nothing like a darn good try. Strangely enough, it has worked before. It may work again, too, but with the need for cramming in sight, all those postponed odds and ends had best be out of sight and out of mind.

Let's wipe them out now while they're seemingly insignificant and go home exhausted lest we come back exhausted to find them monstrous.—A.M.M.

Cwens To Hold Novelty Party

A come-as-you-were-when-invited party will be held by the sophomore Cwens to commemorate their Founder's Day in the southeast lounge of Atherton Hall from 8:30 p. m. to 10 p. m. tonight.

Marie Haidt, head of the women's department of Physical Education and Mrs. F. W. Haller have been invited, in addition to all alumnae Cwens on campus, the dormitory hostesses, and members on the staff of the Dean of Women.

Committees appointed are—invitation, Muriel R. Meiselman, Joanne M. Palmer and Lila A. Whoolery; entertainment—Margaret M. Lams, Betsy E. Munroe and Marjorie L. Sykes; food—Ruth L. Kiesling, Ruth J. Moore and Margaret K. Sherman; place—Louise M. Fuoss.
