Post-Rushing Problems Before Panel Tonight

With another rushing season completed, Panhellenic Council will meet tonight to discuss post-season problems, to formulate plans for its annual bridge tournament, and to approve parts of this year's Rushing Code as a nucleus for next year's.

An invitation from IFC for a joint bridge tournament will be considered and committees appointed.

As soon as pledge presidents are elected in each house, the Panhellenic rushing committee will meet with them to begin work on the new code. Suggestions and criticisms will be solicited from freshmen and sorority women in an effort to eliminate some of this season's defects as the group starts revision.

We, The Women—'Home Was Never Like This . . .'

About four years ago a graduate of one of the best-known men's universities in the country slumped down on the parental sofa, propped his saddle-shod feet on the coffee table, hooked his thumbs in a brilliant plaid vest, and displayed pride in his recent accomplishment. "Son," said his dad, "Now that you've acquired 'cultural background' what about investigating the works of Emily Post?"

We can aptly sum up this father's advice by saying . . .

"Home was never like this!"

Radio music swinging down dormitory halls to the consternation of the occasional coed who would appreciate a few hours of quiet study . . .

"Home was never like this!"

Card tables standing lopsidedly in the middle of lounges covered with what resembles a game of "Fifty-two pickup" . . .

"Home was never like this!"

Cigarette ashes ground into rugs . . . ash trays with a week-old smell . . . lines of personal laundry strung diagonally across rooms with the most personal items exposed to passersby . . . clippings of pet movie stars and such slogans as "All men are rats" hung on walls . . . remains of last week's midnight feast still lying on the night table . . .

"Home was never like this!"

Unmade beds . . . dirty dishes in-the kitchenettes . . . rolls of dust on desks and bureaus because the tops were not cleared on cleaning day . . . shouts and loud laughs guffawing through "sound proof walls" . . . strands of hair in wash bowls . . .

"Home was never like this!"

Dining commons frequenters dressed in jodphurs, ski suits, and slacks . . . orders for eggs . . . calls for catsup and jam . . .

"Home was NEVER like this!"

Pledge List Reaches 164

Sorority pledge list was increased to 164 yesterday as Kappa Alpha Theta raised its total to 18 by accepting Betty H. Christman '44. Because she made previous arrangements with the dean's office to be away, the three-week rule of no pledging was waived.
