Leitzell Forces Buses To Use New Depot As Wind Howls

An icy gale rattled the windows. The temperature outside was 10 degrees above zero. It was at least 10 degrees warmer inside. Two arms of the law stood huddled around a small coal stove.

No, this wasn't a police shelter in the wilds of Alaska. This was State College's new bus depot on North Atherton Street at 11:59 last night.

Improvised wooden benches lined three sides of the tiny room.

Boxes of chocolate bars were ranged on newly-built shelves, reminding one of Admiral Byrd who found chocolate necessary to provide energy for long treks across arctic wastelands.

Two representatives of Pennsylvania Greyhound Lines, Inc. and a taxi driver waited bundled to their ears, to welcome the first passengers to the new terminal.

At exactly 11:59 the first bus rolled in on its run from Pittsburgh to New York. Two passengers alighted and looked around to get their bearings.

The first passenger, a girl, picked up her bag and started towards College Avenue. When asked what she thought of the new stop she answered, peevishly, "Well, I work in the Corner Room. I think it's awful."

The second passenger to get off the bus was a college student who when questioned about the new depot said, "I don't know what to think. This is the only bus depot in the world outside of Boxes have been placed in town so townspeople and faculty members may also donate money to the campaign.

Defiant Temple Senior Says No; Penn State Man Collects Dough

While thousands of college students bemoan the Selective Service Act, there is one student on this campus who thinks that it is good legislation for reasons other than national defense.

He is Quentin R. Fehr '41 who yesterday received notification of his selection as recipient of the senatorial scholarship revoked from Sturge Steinert, Temple student who defied the draft laws and as a result was sentenced to a year's imprisonment.

In 1937 Fehr received honorable mention in the American Legion essay contest in which Steinert was awarded first place. Fehr's only comment last night was, "That's fate for you. I never would have believed it."

National Survey Includes Campus

Cooperating with the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education, the College is taking a survey of all students enrolled in engineering and other technical courses as part of a nationwide study of the feasibility and desirability of accelerating the regular undergraduate programs of the colleges of the country in these fields.

This study has been requested by the Advisory Committee on Engineering Defense Training of the U. S. Office of Education because of the shortage of engineering and other technical graduates for government work and defense industries.

The tentative proposal would provide for summer classes in these courses to advance the date of graduation three or four months for the present juniors, six or eight months for the present sophomores, nine or 12 months for the present freshmen, and 12 months for incoming classes. The Federal Government would meet increased operating costs of the colleges, including summer tuition and fees, but not living costs of the students.

Loan Fund Supported By Engineering Council

The student loan fund, proposed as one of the gifts of the class of '41, has received the support of the engineering students, Charles L. Hamilton '41, Engineering Student Council president, announced today.

The council also appointed Richard Geissinger '41 and Eugene Fickes '41 co-chairmen of the Engineering Open House on March 15.

67 Delegates To Take Part In 3-Day Meeting

Sixty-seven delegates from 24 Pennsylvania colleges will arrive on the campus tomorrow morning to take part in the second annual Pennsylvania Student Government Association convention tomorrow, Saturday and Sunday.

The conference will be patterned along the same lines as the one held here last year. The association was organized under the leadership of Penn State. It has as its purpose "the interchange of ideas" and "the organization of student governments in colleges which do not now have their own systems."

Three speakers of prominence in the east will feature the convention. They are William Mather Lewis, state director of Selective Service; William S. Livengood, Jr., state secretary of internal affairs; and Lyman Beecher Stowe, president of the New York City Authors' Club.

Other speakers will be Hartwell K. Blake, former president of the student government at the University of Hawaii; Dean A. R. Warnock, who will welcome the delegates at luncheon tomorrow; Dean Charlotte E. Ray, who will talk at dinner tomorrow; and President Ralph D. Hetzel, who will introduce Dr. Lewis at dinner Saturday.

Most of the actual business of the convention will be carried on at round table discussions tomorrow afternoon and Saturday morning. These will cover all functions of student government. They will be open to all students as well as recognized delegates.

Steidle Confident Of Appropriation

A feeling of confidence that the bills for appropriations to the Mineral Industries research bureau, recently introduced into the State Assembly, would be passed was expressed by A. W. Gauger, head of the MI research school, upon his return from a joint hearing of House and Senate mines committees held at Harrisburg Tuesday.

Dean Steidle urged passage of the bill, saying that if appropriations were not made, a relapse to a decade ago, when the school possessed a "beautiful physical plant but nothing else," would probably occur.

One bill asks for $75,000 and an equal sum from coal industries. This amount would cover research in coal only.

The other bill, to provide funds for research in all fields of mineral industries, requests $125,000 from the state and $50,000 from all mineral industries.
