

Cap, Matrix, Quill Girls Will Receive Awards

Presentation To Climax Annual Matrix Banquet

Climaxing the annual Matrix Banquet Monday night will be the presentation of awards to Cap Girl, most versatile senior, Matrix Girl, the senior who has contributed most to the College, and Quill Girl, most popular coed.

Miss S. M. R. O'Hara, Secretary of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, will address prominent faculty and coed guests invited by Theta Sigma Phi to the formal dinner at the Nittany Lion Inn at 6:30 p.m.

Action of the original skit to be presented by members of the journalism honorary will revolve around "The Pants Press" and "Famous Femmes."

Off the record scenes of publications issued by women in journalism, and the upheaval of offices and material from the finished product will be given. Side-lights from the lives of BWOC's and their campus antics will be pulled from ashes and turned into live coals.

Acceptances to the banquet must be turned in to Student Union by noon Monday, Jane A. Fulton '41, Theta Sigma Phi president, has announced.

The speaker, one of the most prominent women in Pennsylvania, has been active in political circles for many years. Miss O'Hara was appointed Deputy Attorney General by Governor Fisher in 1927 and served during the administrations of Governors Fisher and Pinchot, under Attorneys General Baldrige, Wood, and Schnader.

IFC-Panhel Teams Vie In Bridge Tournament

Between 100 and 125 fraternity teams are expected to enter the IFC-Panhellenic bridge tournament, scheduled for the second and third weeks of this month, chairman Robert L. Elmore '41 has announced.

These teams will play off and eliminate until the number of fraternity entrants equals the number of sorority teams. Men and women will then complete the tournament for one cup which will be awarded to the highest fraternity team and another cup to be decided upon by Panhellenic Council for the champion sorority pair.

The two champions will then face each other in a novelty match to determine the final winner.

Coeds Accept Pins At First Offering

By EDITH L. SMITH '43

Most of the pinned coeds on campus accepted fraternity pins the first time they were offered. Such was the conclusion drawn by a psychological survey conducted recently among 100 upperclass women.

One half of the women interviewed were pinned to men no longer attending college. The interview showed that a large percent of these coeds now date other men without the knowledge of the men they are pinned to. However 15 were true to the rightful owners of their pins.

More junior women than women in other classes have clasped fraternity jewelry on their sweaters. As a rule, the questionnaire proved, coeds received pins after dating a man for six months.

Few coeds have had more than one fraternity pin; but one had five. Each believed her pin was the real thing, and admitted that it meant more to her than she liked to admit.

The fraternity house placing highest in the number of members handing out pins was DU.

Fiorillo '41 from the Philadelphia Club, Ruth N. Ginter '41 from the Harrisburg Club, Miriam Jones '41 from the State College Club, and Grace E. Rentzschler '41 from the Reading Club.

Gives Rare Books

Fred Lewis Pattee, above, will give his collection of early American literature to the Library at its dedication on March 15.

Pattee To Give Valuable Books

"May our lives help swell thy fame," a line in the "Alma Mater," written by Fred Lewis Pattee, was personally interpreted by the author when he decided to give his valuable collection of American literary works between 1800 and 1850, to the Library at its dedication, March 15.

Pattee's books will place the Library among the nation's leaders in collections of early American literature. During his 35-year stay on the campus, he collected most of them and says "they really belong here."

"I get the 'blues' every time I send a consignment away, for every one of them has a story connected with the getting of it and a joy that only the book-hunter can know," Pattee remarked.

Professor Pattee first brought American literature courses to the College when he came here in 1894. This College was one of two in the country which offered such courses then.

The library was totally useless, according to Pattee, and he found it necessary to go to Philadelphia and New York libraries to do his research work. He found it cheaper to buy old books at auctions where rare titles could be purchased for what hotel rooms would cost in those days.

"I deserve but little praise for what I am doing for Penn State, for I have received from the old College more than I could ever repay."

Professor Pattee now teaches at Rollins College in Florida and has won recognition as being one of the foremost authorities in the country on the history of the American short story and its criticism.

Viewing The Draft

Editor's Note:—This is one of several articles relative to the college student's role in the draft written especially for Collegian readers by a member of the staff who has been covering draft developments since last August.

By JOHN A. BAER

When will the next draft registration be?

That question, perhaps more than any other, is uppermost in the minds of men who have become 21 since the last registration day or who will be 21 in the near future. Unfortunately, the question must go unanswered. No date has been set and government authorities refuse to make predictions.

However, two possibilities have been suggested. Either of them could easily become fact. One of them certainly will.

1. A national draft registration day will be proclaimed, possibly on the same date as last year, October 16. Dates have been mentioned from this April 1 to June, 1942, but there is no definite information.

2. The government may decide upon a week of registration through local draft boards. This plan has one big advantage in that machinery for registration is already set up and few additional preparations would need to be made. If this scheme is adopted it would probably go into effect sometime before July 1.

It is also highly possible that provision will be made for continuous registration of all men on their 21st birthdays. This, in combination with a registration day for those who have passed 21 since last October 16, would obviate the need for additional periodic registrations in the future. It would be a smoothly operating system and would solve many problems.

The exact method by which new draftees will be absorbed into the existing reserve of those not yet called has not been determined. They will either be assigned numbers already drawn or will be put into a separate pool.

This is all speculation. Only one thing is certain—men who have become 21 since the last registration will be required to register and will be subject to call. The "national emergency" will not be over next week, next month, and probably not next year. And we will all be obliged to do our part.

Tea will be served in the southwest lounge of Atherton Hall from 3:30 to 5 p.m. today.
