Some Points New WRA Board Should Consider

WRA officers to be installed tonight may look to their predecessors as efficient leaders of women's recreational activities, and the outgoing board may well boast of its successful projects.

Sports Day last spring, with attendance from over 40 colleges; Co-Recreation Day, with combined men and women's play in tennis, badminton, archery, and bicycling; and the hockey clinic conducted by the U. S. Touring Team were some features of the year.

Yes, women's recreational activities fared commendably under the past regime, but the newly-elected officers can improve the Women's Recreation Association. Biggest obstacle to overcome is small amount of non-major participation in activities, and apparent indifference of non-sorority women during intramurals.

While discrimination between sorority and non-sorority women in present intramurals may expedite programs, it decreases enthusiasm on the part of non-sorority coeds, and thus defeats WRA's purposes. The swimming meet Tuesday night was conducted enthusiastically with both sorority and independent leagues, and although only three sorority teams competed, two non-sorority squads participated, indicative of their interest in recreation.

Non-major representation on WRA Board would perhaps improve relations between physical education majors and women in other schools. The latter group certainly does not resent the skill of the majors and in fact appreciates playing with them. Sorority affiliation, furthermore, should not form the basis of intramural tournaments.

If WRA's new executors continue to expand on the present program, and plan more natural relations between sorority and non-sorority groups, and between majors and non-majors, they will have raised the already high standard of women's recreational activities on campus.

There is a certain gentleman on a New York state campus who is boxing in collegiate circles and who also boxed as a novice before entering this northern N. Y. state university—

When and if the German soldiers do enter Greece, it appears that the main problem confronting the Nazis will be to decide whether the men running toward their lines are the Greeks advancing, or the Italians retreating.

Freedom of the collegiate press can be measured by a publication's right to do away with a football coach.

The University of Pennsylvania has the best student government in the nation, claims the Daily Pennsylvanian.—"I do not agree with what you say, but I will fight until death your right to retract it."

Sorority rushing is a system of "catch as you can" according to recent reports.—The howls of the cats on the back fence are also annoying.

Senator Wheeler, Montana's anti-diplomat, claims that the men at Ft. Bliss and San Diego training camps are being taught how to defend Singapore.—If that is true, it might be a nice time to find out what the clause, "for other purposes" means in the Lend-Lease Bill.

"Attack on Turkey" seen as next move," screams New York Times headline.—Isn't it about time we decide this Thanksgiving date?
