

Everybody Gets a Laugh When
'All Us Boys Are Girls'

Campus productions in which he-men turn their talents to fill female roles always wow the house. And why shouldn't they? Lipstick, wigs, mascara, false lashes, and ruffles transform bulging muscles and barrel chests into voluptuous curves, dimples, and limpid eyes — but with what results! Here are a few good samples.

Ada Leonard, ex-strip tease artiste, is shown looking over some of the prospective "chorines" for the University of Wisconsin's 1941 Haresfoot Club production "Place Your Bets". Most of these boys are well known athletes.

Athletic stars of Marris Harvey College pranced through a pantomime football game while dressed in ballet costumes. Cute, aren't they?
Collegiate Digest Photo by Heilpern

Cadets Ted Sliney and C. M. Busbee apply the glamour for footlight appearances in the 100th night show, "Malum in Se", staged at the U. S. Military Academy. Acme

Kick Away Al Cole, Stanford wing three-quarter, gets off a fast kick as Ted California wing forward, attempts to block during the Pacific Coast championships. By taking this game 13 to 8, Stanford's ruggers an

It's a Sad Moment Bob Davies (head bowed), blonde dribbling wizard of Seton Hall College's crack basketball team, is shown shortly after he left the game with L. I. U. because of personal fouls. L. I. U. gained the tourney finals by taking this game 49 to 26, put an abrupt end to Seton Hall's 43 game winning streak. Acme

Furman University glee club members donned feminine attire when they presented the Gilbert and Sullivan opera, "Trial by Jury". Believe it or not, these fellows are bridesmaids! Fanc Jthac