

Widgit Model Tips Hat, Steals Show At 'Parade' In Cathaum Last Night

Tipping his hat to the audience as he modeled a camel's hair top coat in children's wear, little Hal Byers, son of Harold E. Byers of State College, stole the title of "smoothest man on campus" in "Fashions on Parade" at the Cathaum Theatre last night.

The fashion show, with a background of flower baskets and music by John W. Harkins '41, will be repeated between shows tomorrow night under the direction of J. K. Robertson, Warner Brothers manager. Leslie A. Lewis '41 described the 30 models last night and presented Miriam J. Rhein '43, who sang during the performance.

Taking honors among the evening dresses was a summer evening gown worn by Mary Ann Aikens. It was made of organdie with a separate fuchsia faille basque inspired by Greek uniforms. Jeanne A. Smith '41 modeled a celanese jersey formal with asymmetrical drapery and ancient Greek bands.

Low waistlines took the spotlight in both formal and date dresses. They appeared in a silk jersey shirt-waist of a dinner gown worn by Earnestine Nixon '41 and again in a spectator sports dress of flame and white silk shantung, modeled by Nancy Fletcher.

Slack suits and informal dresses were modeled, and men wearing Palm Beach suits and formal attire escorted models down the aisle past the audience.

"Living with your job and liking it entails liking living," stressed Dr. Rebecca Gibbons, head of the foods and nutrition department of the University of Nebraska, at the student-faculty banquet climaxing the Vocational Guidance Conference last night.

Dr. Gibbons pointed out that liking living depends upon what we let ourselves think about, upon our use of good judgement and common sense.

About 162 students scheduled half-hour conferences with Mrs. Ruth McCurdy, Miss Jeanne Lovejoy, and Mrs. Millison, conference advisors. These conferences were given to groups of five yesterday afternoon.

We, The Women

A Non-Sorority Unit At Penn State?

Possibility that Grange Dormitory may become a unit for non-sorority women presents a new problem to Penn State women.

Commendable action has already been initiated with a committee meeting with both factions equally represented. Views from the two sides were presented and conclusion drawn that Grange residents discuss the problem in house meetings and later vote on the issue.

Decision must be reached before the middle of May when coeds draw for next year's rooms. It is, therefore, imperative that women students consider the matter immediately and objectively.

Principle views, presented at the meeting, include:

PROS

Provide unification, initiative, and leadership to non-sorority women.

Promote feeling of "belonging" and create interest in working for a group.

Establish headquarters for independent women.

CONS

Create rift between sorority and non-sorority women.

Loss of free intermingling and intimate contact outside own group.

Encourage political growth thus creating undesired element in elections since real backing is determined by self, not group.

No matter what dormitory they live in, all Penn State women should consider the problem.

700 'Big Sister' Sheets Distributed By House

Approximately 700 "big sister" sheets for freshman and sophomore women have been given to WSGA House of Representative members for distribution, E. Miriam Jones '43 town senator, announced last night. All sheets should be in the Dean of Women's office by April 30.

A discussion on continuing "twin sisters" or introducing upperclass counselors for transfers next year was held at the House meeting following a report on transfer orientation by Anna Lee Carey '42.
