

Hillman Urges Draft Deferment For Engineers

By Intercollegiate Washington Press

WASHINGTON, April 25—Associate Director Sidney Hillman of the Office of Production Management today urged occupational deferment from selective service for college students who are studying civil, electrical, chemical, mechanical, mining and metallurgical engineering, as well as all branches of chemistry.

Manpower in these fields is at a "dangerously low level," he declared in asking national draft officials to give "immediate attention" in preventing any unnecessary increase in the shortage.

In a letter to Acting Draft Director Lewis B. Hershey Mr. Hillman said that representatives of industry, the professions, and the nation's colleges and universities also anticipated early shortages in agricultural and sanitary engineering, dentistry, pharmacy, physics, biology, bacteriology, geo-physics, meteorology, hydrology, cartography, and medicine. Mr. Hillman warned that "the flow of trained graduate students into these fields should not unnecessarily be interrupted by the action of any agency of Government."

"It is my conclusion," he wrote, "that the national interest requires that students be encouraged to continue their education in these fields and that the principle of occupational deferment under the Selective Service program may be used to assure their future availability to all activities relating directly or indirectly to the national defense program."

Although the letter was not immediately made public by either the O P M or national draft headquarters, it was learned authoritatively that the letter would be transmitted later in the week to local draft boards throughout the country.

Daylight Saving Time Seen As Boon To Coeds

At 12 o'clock tonight, coeds, Joe Colleges, and professors alike will wait expectantly for Father Time's invasion of State College. After turning the hands of all clocks ahead one hour, the old gentleman will disappear and not return again until September 27 when he will undo tonight's work.

Since "fast" time begins officially at midnight, coeds with 1 o'clock permissions will enjoy rights that will occur only twice each year. Coeds admit, "If our dates are boresome, we need only convince the boyfriend that coeds have to be in their rooms at 1 o'clock (fast time). That will make our date one hour shorter." However, WSGA allows dates to be run according to slow time, unless wanted otherwise.

1922 Class Gift To Scholarships

Arrangements will be completed this morning to turn the $31,000 Class of 1922 memorial fund over to the College scholarships for upperclassmen prominent in "cultural activities"—debating, dramatics, literature, music, and similar pursuits. Originally the class had voted its money—raised on pledges paid after graduation—for a swimming pool.

The scholarships are to be awarded annually in any amount the Senate scholarship committee may decide.

After Robert R. Burtner, Harrisburg, chairman of the class gift committee, today secures final signatures from his committee authorizing transfer of the money, the only step remaining is to have the Board of Trustees accept the gift at their June meeting. At their January meeting, they indicated they would do this.

Requirements for the scholarships are completion of two semesters in College, satisfactory scholarship, and good moral character. They are not to be limited to any school but preference is to be given to students prominent in cultural activities as distinguished from athletic. They will be the only scholarships the College offers on this basis, and will begin next fall.

Helen Cramer Reigns As Queen; 'Penn State On Parade' Is Theme

"Penn State on Parade," third annual All-College Circus, will open the flaps of its huge tent at 8 o'clock tonight in Recreation Hall to entertain an overflowing crowd of 5,000.

With Helen B. Cramer '41 reigning as queen of the Big Top, over 300 performers will take part in the two-hour show, organized by Gene Wettsone and sponsored by the School of Physical Education and Athletics.

The theme of this year's circus is patriotic, and the title "Penn State on Parade" is derived from the grand finale in which the outstanding representatives in each student activity are presented in a magnificent setting. With a red, white and blue background, the Circus will portray the College's contributions to the national defense program in a la Billy Rose style.

The queen and her attendants, Ruth K. Kistler '41 and Ruth J. Moore '43, will be presented in an elaborate opening number which will include the "March of Youth" by 50 girls, and a unique ball room dance led by Betty E. Widger '42.

The featured attraction of the evening will be the act of Bob Hoffman and his world champion weight lifters from York. The visiting muscle-men have won world renown and promise to give one of the finest displays of weight lifting ever presented.

Included among the numerous acts by students will be a display of aerial acrobatics, featuring Clair Hess and Ben Stahl, the "bouncing foals," "five girls on a trapeze," and "the tumbling Arabs." In addition four fraternities, Beta Sigma Rho, Delta Sigma Phi, Lambda Chi Alpha, and Sigma Nu will vie for the trophy in the skit contest won last year by Phi Delta Theta.
