

Defense Course Open To Liberal Arts Graduates

Liberal arts graduates may enroll in production engineering, one of the two government-sponsored national defense training courses that will be repeated at the College beginning June 11, Clarence E. Bullinger, head of the department of industrial engineering, disclosed yesterday.

The course, which will continue through 16 weeks, is open to students with a minimum of two years of college work, and also to persons who have graduated from accredited four-year schools and who in addition, have commendable industrial experience. Tuition fees will be paid by the government.

One of the features of the enrollment makeup of the new course is that it will be available to unplaced liberal arts graduates who show technical interests. "No job guarantee will be given these students who complete the course, but many of them should find placement in the present under-supplied industrial field," Professor Bullinger said.

Several changes will be introduced into the repeat course as compared to the one just completed. The enrollee quota has been increased from 30 to 32. Professor Bullinger also emphasized that industrial relations will receive less stress and more time will be devoted to shopwork and inspection.

Of the 31 original enrollees in the first production engineering course, seven dropped out to accept jobs before completing the course. Of the 24 who completed the work, seven had jobs lined up before graduation, and six others had promising contacts.

Diesel engineering, the other of the two defense courses, was scheduled to begin its repeat session yesterday. However, the Diesel course was open only to 25 Naval Reserve Officers who, when they complete the work, will be qualified to accept positions as officers on Diesel-operated Naval vessels.

Vincent Lopez Foresees End Of War

By JAMES E. McCaughey '42 and LAWRENCE S. DRIEVER '41

We talked with Vincent Lopez Wednesday night and found that in addition to being a band leader, he's an astrologer, a mathematician, a student of the Bible and a meteorologist all rolled into one.

What's more, he told us he uses his talents not in any ordinary way but to predict world events. He made three predictions which, if they come true, will put him miles ahead of all the crystal ball gazers and prophets the world has ever seen.

His three predictions were that the British will win the war,

Warnock Predicts Enrollment Decline

Thomas J. L. Henson '42 will replace H. Edward Wagner as president of Interfraternity Council for the coming year as a result of elections held at the Delta Sigma Phi fraternity last night. Robert Wilson '42, who polled the second highest number of votes in the presidential race, automatically took over the vice-presidency formerly held by Erik S. Moeller '42.

Burnett C. Carlton '42 was named to the secretary-treasurer post after three ballots. He defeated John M. Gerecter '42, Howard H. Earl '42, and Robert W. Fickenscher '42 in replacing William S. Kirkpatrick '41 for the office.

Henson received a majority of votes of the 43 houses present to win the election on the first ballot. Beside Wilson, he was opposed by William F. Finn '42 and William J. McKnight '42.

Theodore Casnoff '42 and Charles F. Bowman '42 were named to the executive committee of the organization. William P. Hindman '41 was the third candidate.

Dean A. R. Warnock, speaking to the fraternity presidents on the effect of the Selective Service to enrollment and fraternity rushing for the coming year, stated, "I believe the upperclasses will fall off in enrollment but there will be more incoming freshmen." He predicted the decline in students might reach the 500 mark.

Warnock pointed out that local draft boards have been notified to use integrity in taking men from college because of the deficiency of employment in production necessitates the education of more men.

The Dean of Men advised students who expect to be called for training in September or October not to attend school, but to ask their local boards to send them early so that they might be able to enroll on time for the completion of their education the following year. In reference to quitting school to take employment, he warned "get your degrees first so you can handle the better paying jobs later."
