Senior Diplomas

The skins must be kept perfectly dry to insure good quality and even though this order was packed in zinc-lined, waterproof boxes, some of them got damp.

Registrar Hoffman reports that all but 330 diplomas have been received to fill the order of 2000. He believes that there will be little difficulty in getting this order filled but predicted that the outlook for having diplomas another year is very dark.

The diplomas this year are courser than in the past because the English companies are getting the skins from older sheep. The hides from the younger sheep are now being used for the lining of aviators uniforms.

The diplomas are slightly tinged with yellow this year and are not pure white as usual. The reason is that the skins were usually bleached in a fresh bath of salt water but due to the scarcity of salt in England, the baths are used several times. Sometimes, the tanners even throw them in the ocean salt water for bleaching.

Former Froth Editor Gets Iraq Assignment

E. A. (Al) Noderer, foreign correspondent for the Chicago Tribune and former Froth editor, left at noon Saturday for Basra, Iraq, and Cairo, Egypt on a newspaperman's "dream" trip.

He will fly 23,000 miles in 18 days to reach his new assignment. Noderer recently returned from 12 months in Germany as a war correspondent. Penn State students heard his interpretations of Nazi life when he addressed the journalism I class here in March.

The representative of the Chicago Tribune had difficulty in securing passports for his trip to Egypt. The Iraq diplomat in New York, who granted him a visa, was discovered to have no standing in Iraq due to the revolt there.

Encouraged by British officials, who claim to exert influence, Noderer will attempt to enter the country without official papers.

We, The Women For The Glory Of Old State

Instigation of tryouts for coed cheerleaders indicated willingness of All-College Cabinet and the cheerleader committee.

But what has happened to enthusiastic coeds?

Used to be they fought for the privilege; now they don't respond to their opportunity. Maximum number of women trying for the job is three at each practice.

True, definite statement was not made of the certainty of added grandstand appeal of cheerleaders. Initiative was left up to coeds to try for the unprecedented posts.

Reprimands were issued at the start of the football season concerning lack of college spirit. Endeavors to remedy the trouble were undertaken, spirit improved, but those in authority felt added enthusiasm possible.

Agitation for coed cheerleaders began long ago. This was pursued as a possible solution to the difficulty. Discussion led to action, and announcement was made of coed tryouts.

Lacking was adequate coed support. It's still missing.

Time is short for brushing up on pep, vim and vigor necessary for the job but there is adequate time for more women to come out and learn the routine.

Many coeds have the spirit and umph required—why don't they try to bolster the glory of old State?

Plane Crash

crash. Most noticeable among the bits of wreckage was a partly burned book, which had been lying at the right side of Mrs. Brewster. Thirty feet away, a capsized overnight bag bearing the initials, L. L., could be seen lying next to one of the cylinders of the motor.

After allowing the reporters to look over the wreckage, officials stationed a police guard and ordered everyone to leave the scene of the crash.

Camp Confab At WRA Cabin To Enlighten Coed Counsellors

If coed camp counsellors usually char their steaks, if star-gazing means another pain in the neck, and if all the trees on the nature walk look like elms to them, they'll want to be enlightened at the Camp Counsellor's Conference at the WRA Cabin Saturday and Sunday.

Sessions in fire-building, an outdoor steak dinner, campfire programs, star-gazing, and story telling are planned for the third counsellor's convention, according to R. Helen Gordon '42, chairman.

Guest speaker at the conference will be Miss Ione V. Sykes

Senate Passes Counsellor Plan

A House Counsellor Plan, suggested by Mrs. Neva B. Morris, Grange hostess, will be given a year's trial, beginning next fall, when upperclass women will be elected from dormitory units to assist hostesses in coed problems, WSGA Senate announced last night.

Women elected advise coeds on special problems and help them with difficulties. They will work independently of dormitory presidents.

Plans were made for the Women in Defense committee to meet in Dean Charlotte E. Ray's office at 5 o'clock today. Members include Alvira L. Konopka '41, chairman, Alice M. Janota '41, Sara J. Kunzler '42, and Dorothy E. Salzman '42.

Senate has requested a room in Old Main for commuters and town dormitory women to use during the day to bring them closer to campus.

E. Miriam Jones '43 announced the Big Sister meeting for instructions has been postponed until next week.

By popular vote, next year's WSGA dance will be formal, House of Representatives has announced.

Home Management No. 3 Will Hold 'Open House'

The Catherine E. Beecher Home Management House No. 3, better known as the "Old English Comp" building, will be open to students, faculty members, and townspeople from 2:30 to 5 p.m. and from 7 to 10 p.m. Saturday.

Remodeled by the grounds and building department, the new practice house was decorated by home furnishing classes, assisted by Miss Amy G. Gardner, associate professor of home economics, and Miss Ruth L. Bonde, assistant professor of home economics. Modern blond wood furniture has been used throughout the house. Electrical equipment supplements laboratory provisions for household classes.

Named for Catherine E. Beecher, one of the founders of the home economics movement, the house was opened in December. It provides facilities for six students, aided by an advisor, to gain experience in "home living."

Resident students in charge of the Open House are Helen B. Cramer '41, Hazel I. Cressman '41, Kathryn Kupsky '41, Dorothy Godshalk '41, Shirley E. Hebel '41, and Luisa Lugo '41.

Two Ace Golfers Will Meet Coeds

Patty Berg, former national women's golf champion, and Helen Detwiler, top ranking professional, have accepted Dean of Physical Education Carl P. Schott's invitation to give an exhibition on the College golf course, June 3.

Johnnie Fleming '42 and Marge King '42, Penn State's ace golfers, will pair off with the two professionals for the 18 hole exhibition.

Following the exhibition Patty Berg and Helen Detwiler will give a lecture and a demonstration.

Old Cabinet, which was in session during the first part of last night's meeting, endorsed the recently appointed chapel fund committee and suggested that the latter continue in operation upon approval of the new Cabinet. However, new cabinet took no action on this.
