Court Account Shows Charles Schwab Died Broke

Charles M. Schwab, whose philanthropy built Schwab Auditorium, died broke.

Once the owner of holdings estimated at $200,000,000, Schwab died with assets of $51,094 and debts of $300,000, an Ebensburg court learned this week when an accounting of his estate

Schwab one time was as powerful as Andrew Carnègie, another Pennsylvania steel baron, with whom he came to campus in 1903 for the joint dedication of his auditorium and the old library given by Carnegie.

It was thought Schwab was rich when he died last year, but the final accounting showed otherwise. There were some carpenter's tools that sold at $4, some plumbing tools brought $46, an old coupe $20, 2,377 shares of Cambria Fair stock $2, some office furniture $59, silverware and linens in his private railroad car $828.27 (after $38.75 had been paid to have them removed), and so it went.

Artists' Course Sells 208 Seats For New Series

Sale of 208 Artists' Course tickets for next year marked the first day of the first May sale in the history of the series as purchases amounted to $1,000 yester-

With twenty faculty members in line by 8 a.m., sales for the day amounted to 84 transactions. Of the total number of tickets sold, 121 were purchased at $5.50, 44 at $4.50, and 43 at $3.50.

Student tickets are on sale today following yesterday's sale to faculty members and townspeople. Half of Schwab Auditorium has been reserved for the student sale. Seats may be purchased at the Athletic Association windows in the first floor lobby of Old Prices fall into the same three ranges used for this year's series. Tickets may be purchased at the same hours as yesterday, from 8 a.m. to 12 noon and from 1:30 to 5 p.m. The quota that may be purchased by one person has been raised from three to four, in order to accommodate two couples who may wish to sit together.

Commenting on yesterday's sale, Harold R. Gilbert, in charge of sales, stated, "The response was more than we expected. The student sale, however, will probably be far below in proportion.'

The Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra, under the direction of Jose Iturbi, has been signed for next year's series. It received twice as many votes as the two other symphony orchestras combined as well as the greatest number of votes in the preferential ballot taken at the Anna Kaskas performance.
