Shaut Announces IMA Activities

"The decreasing number of fraternities makes it increasingly important that an independent organization carry on to meet the needs of the student body," Elden T. Shaut '42, president of the Independent Men's Association, said last night as he announced the program the IMA intends to carry out next year.

Shaut commended adviser Dan A. DeMarino for his valuable assistance this year and expressed his appreciation for the work of the following seniors retiring from Central Council: John M. Byerly, Eugene W. Fickes Jr., Boyd C. Gartley, W. Rae Herrmann, Frank N. Mengel, and Paul E. Moyer.

Included in the IMA's objectives, as outlined by Shaut, are improving the intramural program, with play-offs between fraternity and independent champions; pushing independent men into managerships, which are now occupied almost exclusively by fraternity men; backing the Student Housing Board to the fullest extent; establishing an annual freshmen banquet in cooperation with the PSCA; and cooperating with the Co-Recreation Committee in establishing weekly Recreation Nights.

A membership drive will be conducted next fall, said Shaut, in order to give more interested students an opportunity to join the organization. The IMA head also pledged full cooperation with IFC, PSCA, WRA, WSGA, and other organizations.

Also in the IMA program is the continuation of emphasis on scholarship, with an annual award to the highest average.

Hetzel Advises Draftees

A request for pertinent material about each draftee will also be made in order that a continuing record can be kept for each student by the College.

Students are again reminded of the draft advisory boards in each school and of the central committee, which is at the service of any enrollee.

"Each registrant should inform himself fully as to his duties and his rights. If you have any question about whether you should continue in college next fall . . . do not hesitate to consult a member of the . . . committee in your school, or your advisor, or the head of your major department, or your dean, or me," concludes President Hetzel.

Fraternities Pay High Food Prices, IFC Survey Shows

Preliminary tabulation of food surveys, distributed to fraternity presidents at a recent IFC meeting, indicates that some fraternities have little conception of the prices they are paying for foodstuffs and that some form of cooperative buying is favored.

Even though only 19 out of 45 fraternities returned surveys, quite accurate statistics were compiled concerning the prices paid for 53 items of foodstuffs. The tremendous range of prices listed by the fraternities shows that some houses don't get full value for their money while a few don't buy in large enough quantities to affect any savings possible.

The results show that the average number of members served in a fraternity house for one meal is 37, and the average food budget of the Greek houses is $707 per month. The majority of surveys submitted were from fraternities working on a low budget and interested in saving.

Staple foods picked at random from the surveys showed a tremendous variation in price. Prices paid for a case of peaches ranged from $2.50 to $5.25 while sugar varied from $4.50 to $6 for 100 pounds.

Loafers Compete For Averages

Corner Room frequenters have the highest All-College average, 1.45 among student loafers according to a survey made by students in William M. Lepley's Psychology 7 classes.

Sandwich Shop frequenters boast a 1.33 average while 'Skeller visitors have a 1.15.

The survey, conducted from 1 to 4 p. m. on April 7 showed that 5.9 hours per week is the average amount of time per person spent in the Rathskeller, 5.4 in the Corner and 4.6 in the Sandwich Shop.

Corner Room loafers boast best studying habits as only 13 per cent of them planning work over Christmas vacation failed to do it, while 17 per cent of Sandwich Shop frequenters neglected work they had planned. Twenty-two per cent of 'Skeller habitués didn't do work over vacation.
