

CLOWN ON THE FLYING TRAPEZE is just one of the Lesselli Marionettes but he can imitate a real performer to perfection. The marionettes show will be given in Schwab Auditorium at 8:30 p. m. Tuesday. This will be the fifth time that the Lesselli Marionettes have performed on the campus. They have been here for the past four summers.

and short acts. "Hansel and Gretel," an original version of an old fairy tale, will be the play at the campus performance. Music from the opera, "Hansel and Gretel," will be heard throughout the production.

The marionettes will be presented on a background entirely different from that used in previous years. The troupe has a new stage, a new lighting system, and new grapes.

The marionettes are shown annually from coast to coast. This year, in traveling 27,000 miles, they have crossed the continent three times.

Alumni Center. In Cities; 3,662 Women, 19,509 Men On Roll

Largest concentrations of Penn State alumni are those in the three nearest metropolitan districts, New York, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, an Association report shows. Of the 23,171 living, 260 are now living outside the United States.

Until the last membership campaign, only 1,685 of these alumni were paid up members of the Alumni Association.

A statistical breakdown of the alumni group yields this information:

More persons have received diplomas from the College during the last 10 years than in the whole period from 1861 to 1930.

Among the alumni are 19,509 men and 3,662 women.

The only alumni districts with more than 1,000 alumni are Allegheny County (Pittsburgh) with 1,731, Philadelphia with 1,663, and New York with 1,117.

The largest alumnae district which includes 12 Western Pennsylvania counties around Pittsburgh, has 553 members.

Miss Cranmer Reads Paper At Library Convention

Miss Gladys R. Cranmer, assistant librarian, presented a paper on the organization of the College Library at the Engineering Section of the American Library Association convention in Boston from June 19 to 25.

The convention was attended by seven members of the Library staff. They are Miss Dorothy Adams, Mrs. Sally Carey, Miss B. Elizabeth Ulrich, Miss Elsie Kresge, Miss Cranmer, Miss Adele Aungst, and Mrs. Crystal Bailey. Miss Mildred Ailman who will replace Miss Elizabeth Frear as reference librarian in September also attended the convention.

In the absence of Willard P. Lewis, librarian, Miss Cranmer is acting librarian. Mr. Lewis is spending a six weeks' vacation at Thousand Islands Park, New York.

Sociology Course Given In Philadelphia

A variation of the usual summer course is being offered by the division of sociology which has 15 students quartered in Philadelphia social settlements.

This sociology experiment is a part of the comprehensive summer program of the College offered through 47 separate departments of instruction.

In Philadelphia, the sociology students who are planning to enter the field of social service, get a first-hand acquaintance with some of the pressing problems in contemporary urban life.

Visits to various welfare agencies and institutions supplement the program which has been planned in co-operation with the Philadelphia Council of Social Agencies and the Pennsylvania School of Social Work.

S. C. Police To Check All Unescorted Women

Orders to borough police to check up on and question all unescorted women who are on State College streets alone after midnight were given out by Burgess Wilbur F. Leitzell this morning.

Because of recent molesting of women in the borough, Burgess Leitzell urged that all women on the streets after midnight be accompanied by an escort.

Going Into Rehearsal With Campus Plays

By JOSEPH HUMPHREY

Plays which can be classed in unusual categories will be witnessed by theatre-goers who attend "The Night of January 16th" on July 23 and "Moor Born" on July 30.

is unusual in that it will be presented as nearly as possible like an actual court scene instead of a play. There will be no acts and no curtains. Instead there will be a 10-minute intermission to represent a one-day recess in the trial.

As with any real trial, the jury verdict is the climax of the play. This, too, will be unusual in that members of the audience will be chosen at random to act the parts of jury members. They will retire to a jury room to decide the verdict determining the end of the play which will be entirely unrehearsed by the actors.

"Moor Born" is different from the ordinary play in the completeness of its character portrayal. There is an opportunity for the exhibition of great dramatic talent in the story of the three Bronte sisters—Emily, Charlotte, and Anne—who attempt to sacrifice their talents for their drunkard brother, Bramwell.

Directed by Lawrence Tucker, who proved his ability in "The Streets of New York," the play is an ideal vehicle for the romance and excitement which was characteristic of the last century. In "Moor Born," the lives of three remarkable women are dramatically portrayed.

"Moor Born" has a setting much like that of "Wuthering Heights," written by Emily Bronte, a leading character in the coming campus production. Bruce Cook will design the settings for both "Moor Born" and "The Night of January 16th."

The latter play will be under the able direction of Frank Neusbaum, familiar to all Penn State theatre lovers.

At present, both plays are in the process of casting which should be completed sometime this week. "The Night of January 16th" will have a cast of approximately 25. There will be five women and three men in "Moor Born."

Tickets for both plays will go on sale at Student Union one week in advance of production. The price will be 50 cents. The plays will be presented in Schwab Auditorium.

Women Students Earn $34,000

Nearly 300 women students earned approximately $34,000 at part-time work during the past academic year, according to a survey made by Dean of Women Charlotte E. Ray.

A careful check by College officials, Dean Ray reports, prevents women students from engaging in any work which might endanger their health or seriously interfere with classwork.

A majority of the coeds employed were engaged in NYA work on the campus. One hundred twenty-three women students earned $11,500 in this way. Forty-four earned more than $14,000 working for room and board in private homes.

Others were employed as follows: library work, 32; secretarial work, 22; dormitory checkers, 20; running concessions in dormitories, 17; waitresses, 12; assisting freshmen, 3.

Miscellaneous employment included such jobs as post office clerk, physical education assistant, telephone operator, dormitory nurse, and ticket sellers for movies.

Betts Advises Teachers Against Professional Isolation Policy

Don't be an isolationist in your profession, advises Dr. Emmett A. Betts, director of the Reading Clinic.

"Human knowledge cannot be isolated and classified in clean-cut categories," Dr. Betts said in a pamphlet just published on the visual problems of school children. "Neither can a given profession serve best by following a policy of isolation."

Claiming that the teacher cannot divide his pupil into mental, emotional, and physical parts, he declared that all three must be considered as part of the whole child. Since the educator cannot be a specialist in all fields, he advocated inter-professional collaboration between teachers, doctors, and psychologists as the solution to the problem.

"The debt of a profession to society can be paid only by cooperating with all the agencies for the promotion of human welfare and happiness," he said.

Difficulties in the way of such co-operation include failure to understand the terms used in another profession, he pointed out. Nevertheless, an interchange of mutual problems in professional study groups would overcome that obstacle, he believes. For example, teachers and visual specialists might learn to "talk the same language" and might come to understand the difference between examining eye structure and examining the operation of seeing.

"Such understanding might prevent many visual problems," he added. "At present practical application of new principles lags too far behind their discovery in laboratory research. Although the regimental use of uniform textbooks regardless of pupils' ability was challenged as early as 1860, the practice is still being followed. Similarly some eye specialists are using procedures long ago out-moded."

Explaining that man is fundamentally conservative in changing his behavior, Dr. Betts urged that continued graduate and post-graduate study to keep up with recent progress be "mandatory" in the professions.

70 Visiting Instructors Teach On Campus During Summer Sessions

At the end of post-session, 70 visiting faculty members from 19 states and one foreign country will have been on the campus to supplement a resident faculty of 167.

Among the visiting instructors are several authors well known in their professional fields. In the fields of education and psychology numerous books have been written by Prof. Theodore L. Reller, of the University of Pennsylvania, who taught in inter-session; Dr. Galen Jones, principal of the Plainfield, N. J., high school, who will teach in the post-session beginning August 11; Dr. Edgar A. Doll of the Vineland Training School, Vineland, N. J., and Dr. Paul R. Spencer, principal of the Central high school, Trenton, N.J. both of whom will teach in the main summer session.

In addition, Dr. Mathurin M. Dondo, of the University of California who will teach a course in French poetry, has written a number of humorous textbooks, one-act comedies in French and English, and books on poetry.

Other visiting instructors include A. Sterl Artley, formerly teacher of English at Williamsport; Mary M. Berger, principal of special education at Chambersburg; Mildred S. Coyle, school nurse at Easton; Dr. Thomas H. Ford, superintendent of schools, Reading; Dr. James A. Gathings, of Bucknell University, Lewisburg; Ellen M. Geyer of the University of Pittsburgh, Pittsburgh; Montclair, N. J.

Jo Hays, supervising principal, State College; Pearl Hoagland, formerly teacher of mathematics at Indiana, Pa.; J. Herbert Kissinger, head of the high school electrical department, Reading; Agnes R. McElwee, formerly a teacher in Hanover Township; Dr. Thomas E. McMullin of the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia.

Helen C. Markell, supervisor of home and school visitors in the senior high schools, Philadelphia; Dr. Walter H. Mohr, head of the department of history at the George School, Bucks Co.; A. Reaga Mullen, supervising principal of the Oliver P. Cornman public school, Philadelphia; Hobson Pittman, director and instructor of art at the Friends Central country day school, Overbrook; Dr. M. Claude Rosenberry, state director of music in the department of public instruction, Harrisburg; Ethel M. Sauer of West Chester State Teachers College, West Chester; Maurice E. Trusal, director of visual-sensory aids in the public schools of DuBois; Jacquelin Williams, librarian in the high school at Kingston; and Dr. Paul E. Witmeyer, superintendent of schools, Shamokin.

Instructors from neighboring states include Morris Brenman, teacher of French in Newark, N. J.; Elizabeth Blades Child of the University of Delaware, Newark, Del.; David Hatch, high school teacher of Montclair, N. J.; and Nina Kinney, fine arts teacher of Montclair, N. J.
