

JUDICIAL TAKES MOTHER'S PLACE AT PENN STATE

Instead of Mother informing Daughter that she has stayed out too late and can't date next weekend, it will be WSGA Judicial Committee who inflicts the penalties for disobedience.

Composed of two representatives from each class, the committee functions as a jury which meets weekly to try cases. New coeds will be represented by the sub-chairman of Freshman Council and by another member appointed by WSGA Senate.

Reports bearing the names of women punished, type of penalty, and length of sentence are posted weekly in dormitories where violators live.

Penalties range from a blackmark (five of these means a lenient campus) to a strict campus of indefinite duration. Strict campuses include removal of dating privileges, being in the dormitory for the night by 5:05 p. m., receiving no telephone calls, and not leaving the campus during the penalty. A lenient campus means no dating from 5:45 p. m. Friday until Monday morning and being in the dormitory an hour earlier than the usual weeknight permission.

Minor offenses are punished by the removal of a one o'clock permission and by blackmarks. For example, failure to indicate "riding" when the person signing out intends going out of State College means loss of a one o'clock. Failure to sign in or out when leaving the dormitory on dates results in two blackmarks for each failure to sign.

Violators of customs may be punished by removal of privileges as explained above, by extension of customs, or infliction of stricter customs. Possible penalties include wearing a green band around the head topped with a large green bow, with all hair pushed behind the band and bow, wearing large name tags (about 5 by 12 inches) and wearing large posters reading "Caught Dating." When a coed is put on probation, it means that along with her regular penalty, she has the responsibility of proving herself worthy to remain in college. If she fails, the case is taken up by the Committee and the Dean of Women's Office.

Women Enter Third Year In All-College Government

This marks the third year that women students have been included with men in the All-College student government.

Women voice opinions in these affairs through four representatives on All-College Cabinet which is immediately responsible to the All-College president and vice-president. Presidents of WSGA, WRA, Philotes and Panhellenic Council are coed Cabinet members.

In addition, several women were named to class offices in All-College elections last spring.

Under the constitution, separate governments of men and women students, various school councils, fraternity and independent men's and women's organizations, Student Tribunal and activities groups are brought into the All-College Cabinet, yet retain their individual governments.

WSGA 'Sister' Program Expands Activities

WSGA's Big-Little Sister program now includes more activities and parties than ever before so that big sisters may better assist their little sisters in campus problems, according to E. Miriam Jones '43, chairman.

Freshman women who registered late or who failed to be assigned to big sisters may leave their names at the office of Miss Char-lotte E. Ray, dean of women, or with their hostesses.
