

"Seven Young Men" To Hold Court for Luckless Frosh

Washington has its famous "nine old men" who reign in the nation's Supreme Court, but not to be outdone, Penn State has a similar body known as Student Tribunal. The only difference is that Tribunal has seven members and they're not so old either.

To some of the incoming freshmen customs may seem unimportant and a waste of time. The seven upperclass Justices don't share this attitude at all, but on the contrary, according to chief justice Ray Leffler, "the seven young men" are going to put their heart and soul into the job of enforcement."

It's hard to predict the type of penalties that will be used this fall since each new Tribunal has its own little "whims." Some of the old stand-bys that are sure to be seen on or about luckless frosh on campus include, bird cages, wheel barrows, suitcases, dresses, baby carriages, tricycles, roller skates, shovels, large planks, children's wagons, and similar debris.

Next Wednesday is the day when the "big push" starts and from then on Tribunal's biggest worry will be to catch enough violators for the frosh parade which livens up the football halves. All violations may be reported at Student Union or to Tribunal members.

College Offers Best Recreation

Penn State's recreational facilities, recognized as being among the best in the nation, are open to all students who enjoy a varied program made possible by local environment.

Taking advantage of the natural scenic beauty found in the fall, the College sponsors hikes, bus and bike trips to numerous points around State College. On these trips, lunches and transportation are usually provided at a cost of 10 to 20 cents per person.

An 18-hole golf course and numerous tennis courts, maintained by the College, offer free athletic recreation for everyone during the fall and spring seasons.

In winter, some of the tennis courts are flooded and frozen to convert them into an ice-skating rink, which is used for varsity hockey as well as recreational skating for all students. Although most of the facilities are free, a 10-cent charge is made for use of the ice skating rink.

Skiing is becoming a more popular winter sport among Penn State students, who travel several miles to the mountain ski trail at Shingletown Gap.

HEADS ARTISTS' COURSE—Carl E. Marquardt, College examiner, announces that the Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra has been signed to play as one of the four Artists' Course numbers in Schwab Auditorium this year.

Noted Orchestra Signed For Artists' Course

The Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra, under the direction of Jose Iturbi, has been signed to play in Schwab Auditorium this year as one of the four Artists' Course series.

Although the other three numbers have also been selected, no releases will be made until the committee meets to set a date for this year's ticket sale. For the first time in the history of the series, 289 tickets were sold last May for this year's course. At that time, half of Schwab Auditorium was reserved for students, and the remaining half for faculty and townspeople.

Only 81 students took advantage of the spring sale, as compared with 208 faculty sales. The remaining tickets will go on sale this year at prices of $5.50, $4.50, and $3.50.

Trucking Course Given

A course on problems confronting the trucking industry as a result of fuel shortages was given here last week to motor vehicle fleet supervisors.

Amos E. Neyhart, administrative head of the Institute of Public Safety, directed the course.

small game in the surrounding mountains provides exceptional hunting for nimrods, while one of the State's best trout fishing streams, Spring Creek, which also includes Fishermen's Paradise, is located only a couple of miles from the campus.
