

College To Train 15,000 Persons For Defense Jobs

Launching of a new fall defense training program under which the College will offer tuition-free courses to at least 15,000 persons in 113 towns and cities in Pennsylvania, it was announced yesterday by J. Orvis Keller, assistant to the president in charge of extension.

Mr. Keller said that two full-time courses, in materials testing and inspection and in production control, will be offered on the campus. Prof. C. E. Bullinger, head of the department of industrial engineering, is in charge of admissions to the classes.

The new program, known officially as the Engineering, Science, and Management Defense Training program, is the largest of its kind in the country, according to Mr. Keller. Sponsored by the U. S. Office of Education, it is intended to relieve a shortage of technical workers in defense industries.

Classes, which will be taught at night, will continue for an average of 15 weeks and will start in most communities about the middle of October. Registration will be held about a week in advance of the opening dates.

A total of 60 subjects will be taught, ranging from classes in elementary engineering to highly specialized courses in metallurgy, chemistry, and electricity. A state-wide survey made last summer to determine trained manpower needs of 2,500 industries was the basis on which courses were selected.

Waring, Syncopated Scientist Mixes Music And Medicine

It's common knowledge that one of Penn State's most famous students is the orchestra leader, Fred Waring, but it may not be so well known about a certain contributor to the field of medicine named Fred Waring. Yes, they're one and the same.

Dancers swaying to his dulcet strains, radio fans listening to his harmonies would never suspect it, but Fred Waring's name must be added to the list of laymen who have served medicine.

His invention is called a "blend-or" and is used to prepare colloidal suspensions, dispersions, or emulsions, or to break down animal tissues for use in vaccines. It can also be used by a mother to prepare home-homogenized suspensions of uncooked vegetables.

Dr. Richard W. Grant, head of the music department, has accepted the invitation of the Pan-American Union Music Division to act as a special consultant in music education to promote the understanding of Latin American music and culture.

Dr. Grant will represent the Music Educators National Conference, of which he is a director. He will assist in an Editorial Project which will investigate Latin American music for use in American schools and colleges.

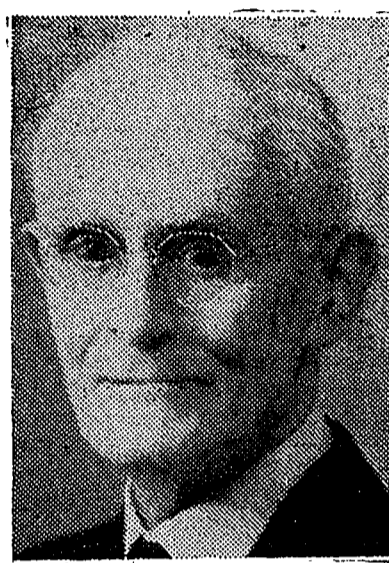

Increased interest in Latin American traditions and customs has caused the project to become "very important in American unity through the music phase of the defense program," according to C. V. Buttleman, executive secretary of the Music Educators National Conference.

"An attempt will be made to make available more of the authentic Latin American music for educational institutions of the United States," stated Dr. Grant.

Ghost Writer Composes '45 Song; Caught Napping By 'Dean' Grant

As unfailling as the seasons, Penn State's ghost writer came through again this year, even though he was caught "napping on the job."

Each fall, "Dean" Richard W. Grant, head of the music department, has gone on a hunting expedition to uncover the hiding place of the new freshmen class song, always composed by an unknown writer.

Breaking all precedent, the ghost writer was unusually congenial this year, probably because he wished to make up for all the trouble he caused last fall when the song almost missed the deadline because of its too secretive hiding place.

First Cabinet Meeting Called For Next Tuesday

Preparing to take over the All-College presidency as successor to Robert D. Baird '42, who joined the Naval Marine Corps this summer, Gerald P. Doherty '42 has called the first cabinet meetings for Tuesday, September 30.

Doherty may also be drafted for Army service before he completes his term, although a decision by the Scranton draft board will allow him to remain in college for the present. The board granted him a "temporary release" but not a year's deferment.
