

Wanted: Coeds With Voice Umph! Ribbons Serve As Apply To 'Hour Of Charm' Audition Customs Prelude

Penn State coeds have been called beautiful and intelligent, chic and charming—but never bashful.

All 1500 of them are bashful however if the number indicating interest in performing on the "Hour of Charm" coast-to-coast broadcast is any criterion.

Until this morning, Hummel Fishburn, associate professor of music education, who is handling next Monday night's audition in Schwab Auditorium, reported only two coeds who plan to enter the competition which pays off $100 for representing Penn State, plus an expenses-paid trip to New York, a spot on the well-known program, and a chance to earn $1,000 for themselves and a $4,000 scholarship for Penn State.

Members of the Louise Homer Club, women's musical honorary, will assist Professor Fishburn in selecting 10 singers next Monday night. Three of the 10 will have their voices recorded by the speech department and one will be named to sing on the "Hour of Charm" program in New York October 12.

Coeds interested in next Monday night's local auditions are asked to report to Professor Fishburn at 422 Old Main immediately.

Just as crisp September mornings are a prelude to fall, so green hair ribbons indicate the approach of another period of freshman womens' customs.

Each year arguments persist as to the most effective ways of perching ribbons upon the head. On the pro side of Peter Rabbit appearances are those who favor the on-the-top-of-the-head, floppy ears personification. Such women flaunt their year before the College, undaunted by the animal-like facade they present.

On the other side, upholding the subtle, see-it-if-you-can crowd, are those who attempt to bury the telling color beneath curls. In this case ribbons are tucked inconspicuously on the rear of the noggin, out of sight of the average upperclass woman.

Regardless of position, ribbons may be purchased from downtown stores for 25 cents. For freshman women with artistic talent, the raw material may be bought at regulation length, three-quarters of a yard, and molded into a bow for a slightly lower cost.

Besides physical desecration freshman women face another mental anguish... THE NO DATING PERIOD. Dating until 5:30 p. m. during the week is permitted following three weeks abstinence. From the first week perspective, the three weeks interim looks long, but it also has its advantages.

Not then does the humiliation end. Those cards, three by five affairs that broadcast names. Peculiar circumstances can arise from name cards... for instance a 10 letter name may complicate the process of lettering and necessitate hyphenation.

No Lost 'Sisters' For Frosh Coeds

It's quite possible and very probable that a needle can be lost in a haystack, but it is no longer probable that a Big Sister can be lost at Penn State.

As a method of simplifying the dilemma of freshman women who know they have a Big Sister on campus but who can only guess at her whereabouts, E. Miriam Jones '43, town senator, has compiled a list of names and addresses of all Big and Little Sisters.

Though not a new idea, the list of Big and Little Sisters on hand will serve as a veritable bureau of missing persons.

As drastic as the silk shortage is the minimum of Big Sisters available to counsel and advise freshmen. Miss Jones has asked volunteer Big Sisters from among upperclass women to telephone 2279.

In appreciation of Big Sisters who have cleared away the first fright of campus life, Little Sisters will honor them at a tea sometime in October.

Senior Sponsors To Give Tips To Freshman Women

Extra-curricular activities, customs, association with men, sororities, and other topics for senior sponsor meetings starting this week with freshman women were discussed by Mortar Board, senior women's honorary, last night when 33 sponsor units were assigned.

Senior sponsors will meet with their groups, divided according to living units, after freshman dormitory hours, before dinner, or at other convenient times. Each sponsor will call her own group to set meeting time and will distribute Panhellenic booklets at the first meeting.

Senior sponsors will explain campus manners and dress, roommate adjustment, budgeting time and will discuss all questions brought in by the freshmen.
