College Gets 75 "Home" Models

Seventy-five original architectural models of the "History of the Home," valued at $80,000 have been presented to the College by the WPA Museum Extension Project in Pittsburgh.

The models were used as patterns to make plaster casts which were distributed to public institutions throughout Pennsylvania. This work was discontinued, however, when the government curtailed WPA activities in order to expand defense production.

According to Fred I. Shoemaker, superintendent of the Museum Extension Project, about 500 man-hours of work were required to make each of the models. He said that the WPA research department worked at the Carnegie Library in Pittsburgh, the library of the University of Pittsburgh, and also obtained information from foreign libraries "so that the models could be reproduced correctly."

The collection was presented to the College through I. C. Boerlin, supervisor of technical school centers in extension, and was accepted by Dean Harry P. Hammond of the School of Engineering.

Countries represented by models of their architecture include the United States, England, France, Italy, Germany, Turkey, Mexico, Spain, Holland, Sumatra, Borneo, and Mesopotamia.

"Customs Not Meant For Hazing"—Leffler

"Freshman Customs are not hazing. They are a group of helps. Delaying freshmen for unreasonable lengths of time, and having them roll up their pants and sing is something Student Tribunal wishes to discourage."

This was the statement made by Tribunal Chairman Raymond F. Leffler '42 as 25 additional students were exempted from customs last night, bringing the total to 84.

He asked that persons wearing ROTC uniforms be exempted from freshman regulations and temporarily freed from hazing. Further cooperation is desired so that students hurrying to classes are not unduly delayed.

Since coeds are under women's restrictions, Student Tribunal requests that men students refrain from hazing them.

Students exempted are:

Al Bollinger, Richard Amihor, Frank Sinclair, Robert Painter, Weldon Ragsdale, Harry Thompson, McKay Carsons, Lawrence Redding, Egon Markofire, John Ross, Robert Lason.

Milton Dinwitz, Gilbert Weinberger, Martin Klein, Nick Oliver, Blair Tressler, Leo Kimball, James McNelis, John Groff, Melvin Checkum, J. Gray Stuart, Jose Lombana, Morton Portnoff, Hyman Gerber, and Leonard Joseph.
