

Etiquette Tips Given To Frosh

Table etiquette suggestions for Mac Hall service were made by Mrs. Elizabeth W. Dye, associate professor of home economics, to aid WSGA Junior Service Board and Philotes at the Hostess dinner for freshman women in Mac Hall Thursday. Next week freshmen will act as hostesses to Junior Service Board and Philotes.

Proper etiquette depends upon the hostess who serves the food since she sets an example for guests. Bread, butter or side dishes must be passed to the hostess first unless she asks guests to serve themselves.

When passing plates for seconds, silverware should be balanced so as not to fall. Leaving silverware in the center of the plate indicates to waiters that the guest is finished. Dishes should never be stacked.

We, The Women Victrolas, Laughter—That's 'Quiet Hour'

Blaring radios and victrolas, shrieks of laughter, needless noise in corridors—such are studying and sleeping conditions of women students in dormitories.

Rules which are difficult to enforce are most easily dealt with by ignoring. Such is the fate of the "quiet hour" regulation.

Each year quiet hours are mentioned in house meetings and proctors appointed. But quiet hours are never kept and few noisemakers are asked to be quiet.

Proctors argue that, after all, they are only students. Obviously, reporting their friends is a quick road to unpopularity. Hostesses cannot possibly patrol several floors of a dormitory. Consequently, conscientious students either sacrifice their own popularity to ask others to be quiet, sacrifice sleep and wait until noise has subsided—or eventually sacrifice study.

Immediate action should be taken before the situation again gets out of control. Hostesses could place more stress on quiet hours and do a little patrolling of halls. Newly appointed student counselors should realize that thoughtless students deserve at least one warning—and then blackmarks.

When women agree to be counselors, they accept responsibility which involves sacrifice. Why should they accept the honor and let other students do their work, as so often happened under the old proctor system?

We are told that coeds need both more sleep and study. But how can we do either under present conditions?
