

Senate Members Study Constitution Revisions

Set-up Copied After Political Instruments

Plans to streamline the WSGA Constitution were submitted to Senate members last night for study and consideration after a senior senator constitution committee had examined and supplemented proposals made last year.

The constitution committee consisting of Jean Babcock, Anne M. Borton, Betty J. Patton, Jeanne C. Stiles and Mildred W. Taylor, made proposals for including specific qualifications, responsibilities, appointments, and installations for all coeds concerned with WSGA bodies.

"The original Constitution, which has never been altered, if approved by senators, will be revised to meet up-to-date WSGA problems," Miss Babcock, president, stated.

The proposed changes have been modeled after political constitutions with articles and sections of the document added to take care of all WSGA groups.

A suggestion was made by the committee to include Junior Service Board in the WSGA set-up. The original constitution had no provision for board members and specifies acceptance for membership through word of mouth and promise of leadership.

Another proposal is concerned with converting the House of Representatives from committee divisions to a legislative body and the origin of WSGA issues.

WSGA branches which have been considered in the proposals by the committee are Senate, House of Representatives, Freshman Council, Junior Service Board, and Judicial.

Outmoded Amazons Go Back To Their Hoops

Women are sissies! Brunhilde, Daisy Mae, and Mamie Mullins, to the contrary—females are definitely the weaker sex according to a survey made under the direction of Dr. Clifford R. Adams of the psycho-educational clinic.

Not only do the fair maidens make more excuses, exhibit more personal prejudices, and sway hither and yon in their opinions, but their faults and foibles keep pace with their years.

Courage proves but fire talk as women show a greater tendency toward fear and are not so well-adjusted as men. Male professors and teachers are less neurotic, less repressed, and better adjusted socially than women instructors. Men like to participate in many activities, but as age catches up with them, they take to the arm chair.

Devised by Dr. Adams and Dr. W. M. Lepley, of the department of education and psychology, the test used in the study, "Personal Audit," measures nine independent personality traits.
