We The Women In The Nature Of An Explanation

For those freshman women who are about to ask their own Li'l Abner to their first Mortar Board Dance, and for any upperclass women still in doubt, we explain:

1. The Sadie Hawkins Dance is informal, but that does not mean dungarees and dirty saddles. Women usually wear silk or wool dresses, and their own King-Dogpatch sports a suit.

2. Vegetable corsages, long a custom for escorted "unmarried bachelor boys," may be sent, or may not, as it pleases the "escortess."

3. Those couples entering from the south end of White Hall, facing Atherton Hall, will have their checking in Room 3. Couples entering from either the main lobby or the northeast door, facing Grange, will be accommodated in Room 103.

4. It has been requested through Grounds and Buildings that couples refrain from smoking in White Hall. Please appeal to your dates to help carry out this request.

Mortar Board's annual dance has been a custom for five years. Last year was the first time the Sadie Hawkins theme was used, netting the local Mortar Boards the largest proceeds of any project undertaken by the 80 chapters of the honor society.

Proceeds of the dance were used to award six $50 scholarships to worthy senior women; as donations to the local Loan Fund; and as Red Cross contributions.

Last year's Sadie Hawkins Dance was climaxed with the crowning of Catch-of-the-Campus, title for Penn State coeds' choice of Li'l Abner. In 1938 the local beau brummel was titled King Sugar Daddy.

Saturday the crown will rest on King Dogpatch.
