

3 Debate Teams In 2nd Place Tie At Shippensburg

Penn State's three teams entered in the Shippensburg Debate Tournament were part of a five-way second place tie at the conclusion of the forensic activity at Shippensburg, Saturday.

The three groups, each consisting of four members, two affirmative and two negative, had identical records of four victories and two losses. Roughton College of New York and Seton Hill of Greensburg were the other teams finishing in the tie.

West Virginia University's team, with a record of five wins and only one setback, copped the tournament title which last year was won by Penn State.

The rankings were made on the basis of a team's combined record. The affirmative groups of Penn State's Team A and the women's team both had records of three wins and two losses but these were offset by the respective negative groups' scores of one win and two defeats.

A busy week is in store for debate squad with two of the group, Bernard M. Weinberg '43 and Gerald P. Doherty '42 leaving today on a tour which will carry them to the campuses of six universities and colleges in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York.

Their first engagement will be at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia at 8 p. m. tonight before a student group when they will discuss, "What Is Youth's Part in the War?"

This is the topic originated by Coach Joseph F. O'Brien, associate professor of public speaking, and Thomas J. Burke '42, former debate manager. This subject has proved popular with debate audiences all this season and its use was expressly requested by the Penn debaters. Coach O'Brien will accompany Weinberg and Doherty on the trip.

Tomorrow night the locals will play host to St. Francis College of Loretta and on Thursday, Dickinson College of Carlisle will be the opponent, here.

Late News Flashes...

SINGAPORE — Japanese terms for the surrender of Singapore were signed by the British commanding officers. American, British and Australian soldiers were disarmed and put into prison camps.

LONDON — Prime Minister Churchill in a speech to Great Britain last night announced the loss of Singapore, but declared that even with this victory Japan is marching to its doom.

TOKIO — It was announced last night that Japan's forces are moving into Sumatra and are taking oil fields and air dromes. The Dutch are fighting hard but overwhelming Jap forces are causing great losses.

MOSCOW — German counter-attacks were smashed all along the central front last night.

HAGUE — A supply depot owned by the Germans was blown up by sabotage yesterday. The Germans gave the Dutch one week to catch those who are guilty, and are holding 30 hostages.

Roland Elliott Talk Scheduled Tomorrow

"A ten cent American hamburger has as much bread as the French get in a day, more meat than they get in a week, and more butter than they get in a year."

This is a statement in an article, "Food, Fight, and the Future," by Roland Elliott, national executive secretary of student Christian Associations who returned from Europe two weeks ago. He will speak in 121 Sparks Building at 7 p. m. tomorrow night.

In Europe, Mr. Elliott visited student centers as well as camps for prisoners, internes and refugees.

Course Bulletins Ready Next Week

Descriptions of six more courses to be offered late this month under the Student Training for Civilian Defense program were released yesterday. Bulletins giving complete information about the 47 courses will be available by next week.

Partial course descriptions follow:

Terrain Appreciation. This three-hour pre-induction course is designed to familiarize the student with the interpretation of military maps in terms of combat. Knowledge of map reading is a prerequisite.

Choice of Consumers' Goods. Taught one hour a week for 10 weeks, this course will help the average consumer more effectively to buy under the extraordinary conditions created by the war.

Auxiliary Police Training. This course will provide training which will qualify the student as an auxiliary policeman for immediate use in case of air raids or other emergencies. Capt. William V. Dennis of Campus Patrol will teach it in three-hour periods once a week for 10 weeks.

Explosives and Demolitions. Completed in 15 hours, this course will prepare men for duty with the armed forces, and will give civilians an understanding of the use of explosives in demolition projects following air raids.

Blackout Precautions. This course, taught two hours a week for three weeks, will provide training in the use of the black light and fluorescence and the provision of essential factors for effective blackouts, that is, those which provide the greatest civilian safety during an air raid. Prerequisite, freshman physics.

Craighead Twins Spend 3 Months With Indian Prince

Three months as a guest of an Indian prince!

That was the experience of the Craighead twins, John and Frank, both of the class of '39. They contributed a 37-page story with 38 illustrations about falconry in India to the February issue of the National Geographic magazine.

It all started back in July 1937 when they were still undergraduates here at State. After having an article on falconry published by this same magazine, they received a letter from K. S. Dharmakumarsinhji (Bapa for short), brother of the Maharaja of the Indian state of Bhavnagar.

This northwestern province is known as "falconer's paradise." "Bapa" had read the twins' article in the American journal and a long-distance friendship was immediately formed. Two years later the prince came to America for a visit.

After the Craigheads graduated, they determined to return the visit. Their chance came when the editor of the National Geographic offered to send them to India in return for a story and photographs of the age-old methods of hunting with trained falcons and the pomp of royal India.

While undergraduates at Penn State, both of the brothers were members of the wrestling team for four years. Frank was a 128-pound matman and John held down the 135-pound spot.

Miller Favored Music To Classes

He got into hot water with his high school principal at the age of 14—for skipping classes to play on his first trombone.

But Glenn Miller, who brings his nationally famous "Moonlight Serenaders" here for Senior Ball February 27, was undismayed by the failure of said principal to see eye-to-eye with him on the matter of jazz versus classes.

He continued his musical activities at the University of Colorado with the college dance band and determined on a musical career when he left college.

Famed as a "musician's musician," Miller got his background with some of today's most famous swing names. He worked for Ben Pollack on the coast, sitting beside a young clarinetist named Benjamin Goodman, Krupa, Jimmy and Tommy Dorsey. He branched into arranging later with Red Nicholas.

A little over three years ago Glenn had an idea. Encouraged by the discovery of several key men whose technique he liked, the young trombonist-arranger decided to form his own band.

With Hal McIntire, supporting the sax section, Chummy McGregor on the piano, Tex Beneke on the tenor sax, and Miller himself on the trombone, the nucleus was formed. The combination was spiced with 18-year-old vocalist Ray Eberle and the blond songstress Marion Hutton.

From then on it was a skyrocket trail to success. The new band started in at the State Ballroom in Boston. From there it was

New York, at the Paradise. Miller went to the Meadowbrook in New Jersey and broke all records at Frank Daily's place.

The Moonlight Serenaders went to Glen Island Casino in Westchester and the popularity of the band was sacclamed nationally.

Glenn Miller's visit here for Senior Ball will be the second one for the maestro. Miller played Junior Prom in 1940, when over 1,200 couples turned out for the affair.

The orchestra is concluding an engagement at the New York Paramount now, and will be taking to road shortly.

All of which ought to prove that it sometimes pays to skip classes to toot a trombone.
