Relax, Draftees, Uncle Sam Grants Three Months Grace

Students who signed for the draft in the February 16 registration have been given assurance by Selective Service officials that they need not expect a call to service before the middle of May, or at least two months after the March 17 lottery.

Before the new registrants will be called, draft headquarters announced, the army will continue to draw on the reservoir of 1-A men remaining from the first two registrations, and will reclassify other old registrants on the basis of the recently relaxed standards for teeth and eyesight.

Since no rule changes in regard to deferment of students have been reported, deferments will be granted, as before, solely at the discretion of the local boards. The recommendations of Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service, that more deferments be allowed in such fields as agriculture, medicine, and industry to prevent shortage of necessary workers are not binding on the local board officials.

British Tars, Veterans Of Dunkirk, Amazed At Fullness, Speed Of Life In United States

By LARRY CHERVENAK

I spent yesterday with two reasons why "there will always be an England."

The reasons were Jack Tilston and James McAdam, youthful Scotch gunners in His Majesty's Navy—and verra proud of it too, begorra

The boys—they were only 22 years o'd—are already hardened veterans in this business of war. Two boyish grins hide the fact that they're already veterans of the Dunkirk and Cherbourg evacuations, of nine months of English Channel patrol, and of a trouble-shooting tour of the Mediterranean, the African west coast and the Caribbean.

They came to the United States unexpectedly last week when the destroyer on which they serve docked at an Eastern port for repairs. Since Saturday they have been staying in State College visiting James McAdam '42, the Scotch McAdam's only American cousin.

Although they have been serving on the same destroyer since the war started, the fighting tars say that they didn't get to know each other until the Dunkirk evacuation. Their ship, stationed at Dunkirk at that time, was being filled with evacuees. While the gun crew that Tilston headed was helping cover the soldiers' retreat, a Nazi dive bomber strafed the ship's deck. Tilston was the only member of his crew to remain alive, so three new assistants were assigned to help him man the gun. One of these "subs" was McAdam.

A note of awe filled both sailors' voices when they mentioned anything about the hell that was Dunkirk. At the dinner table, however, they recalled their experiences since then. They told of the constant bomber and mine menace during their nine months of patrol duty in the English Channel.

Cagers Tie Two All-Time Marks With 44-30 Victory

Gent Paces Scorers
With 15 Points

By GORDON COY

West Virginia's mighty Mountaineers, ranked among the four top basketball powers of the nation, met unexpected disaster in Rec Hall last night as Penn State's inspired Lions jolted the invaders' title-bound drive with a decisive 44-30 triumph.

Playing what Coach John Lawther called "their best game of the year," the Nittany cagers not only extended their current victory streak to ten straight but also tied two all-time Penn State records, and bolstered their chances for a bid to either the Metropolitan tourney at Madison Square Garden or the NCAA at New Orleans.

Nittany hopes grew dim in the early minutes of the game when West Virginia jumped out in front

Coaches' Comments

Penn State's John Lawther — "The fellows played their best games of the year." To top it off, the genial Lion coach added a curt phrase not typical of the usual Lawther—"In fact they played superbly."

West Virginia's Dyke Raese—"I have no alibis. The team was in a mental slump and didn't deserve to win."

by a 5-2 margin as Captain Rudy Baric and Lou Kalmar tallied two quick field goals and Roger Hicks sunk a foul toss. Both of the Lions' points came as a result of free throws by Elmer Gross and Dave Hornstein.

Tightening their famed sliding zone defense, the Lawthermen steadily cut away the visitors' lead to tie the score 12-12 after nine minutes of play. A looping overhead shot by Herk Baltimore and a fast setup by little Larry Gent gave the Lions a 16-12 advantage—a lead which Penn State never relinquished.

While capturing this 16-12 margin, the Nittanymen held the usually high-scoring Mountaineers pointless. To add to the visitors' lethargy, pudgy Scotty Hamilton, play-maker and offensive star, could not find the hoop and West Virginia's fast-breaking attack bogged down.

Rallying in the final minutes of the first half, the invaders pulled to within three points, and the teams left the floor at halftime

Late News Flashes...

MOSCOW — All Nazi troops in northwest Russia are in danger of annihilation or capture, according to Russian authorities. The wide front extends from the Smolensk area to the Leningrad encirclement. According to unofficial reports from Moscow, more than 44,000 Germans were slaughtered yesterday in continued offensive all along the lines.

LOS ANGELES — Japanese airplanes and a blimp were unofficially reported over this city yesterday morning. A five-hour anti-aircraft barrage was said to have cleared the sky during the ensuing blackout.

Pre-Meds Hear Cancer Authority

Any sore or ulcer that will not respond to treatment, or heal in two or three weeks, may be considered a potential cancer. The same applies for hoarseness, a lump, abnormal bleeding, or abnormal discharges.

These are the symptoms of cancer according to Dr. N. Volney Ludwick, Penn State alumnus and professor at Hahnemann Medical College, Philadelphia, who spoke at a meeting of the Pre-Medical Society last night.

Dr. Stanley P. Reiman, A.B., M.D., Sc. D., head of the department of Oncology at the college and member of the Hahnemann Hospital staff, told the pre-med students that all subjects in their present course are valuable for later use.

"Since we don't know all the factors in normal growth, we know still less about abnormal growth, which is cancer," Dr. Reiman stated.

Dr. Ludwick outlined types and symptoms of cancer, and pointed out that surgery, x-ray and radium made rapid strides in the field. He was graduated from Penn State in 1922.

Senior Ball Furniture Must Be Placed Friday

All furniture to be placed in Senior Ball booths at Rec Hall must be ready to be transferred by 1 p. m. Friday, it was announced by Miss Helen S. Bottorf, secretary to the graduate manager of athletics.

Every piece of furniture must be tagged with the name of the house. The Hoy Transfer Company will call at the 48 fraternity and independent houses that have signed up for the service sometime in the afternoon.

According to Miss Bottorf, the furniture will be returned to the houses before 8 a. m. Saturday at which time Rec Hall must be ready for use in regular physical education classes. No more booth rentals will be accepted, she said.

Forestry Society Elect

Jack L. Kiernan '43 was elected president of the Forestry Society at a recent meeting. He succeeds Robert A. Etien '42. Other officers elected include Robert G. Kintigh, vice president; Peter Gaidula, Jr., recording secretary; Ralph K. Peters, secretary; H. Ernest Murphy, treasurer, all juniors.

Historical Antiques Treasured In Unique Archives Of College

No papers clutter the antique cherrywood desk of President Pugh, Penn State's first prexy, nor is President Atherton's mahogany table used for practical purposes. They now serve to enrich the tradition and memories of the Penn State of the past now collected in the Penn State Room in the Library.

A repository rather than a showcase, the Penn State Room is located on the fourth floor of the Library. It contains many items of interest from Penn State history. Since the collection is irreplaceable and the cataloging is not completed, it is not available for use yet.

In this room is a rather complete file of all the College publications such as The Daily Collegian and its predecessor, The Free Lance, Froth, Penn State Farmer and Engineer, the Old Main Bell, Portfolio, LaVie, the College bulletins and catalogues, and many others. Included in the collection are signs and posters used to advertise events on campus.

Old photographs of the campus and State College look strange to the modern eye. A print of College avenue—complete with horse and buggy, dirt road and all, a photograph of the old athletic field behind the old Physics building, and many pictures of now historical student activities preserve old ceremonies and traditions long forgotten.

Letters from Presidents Lincoln and Buchanan are a couple of the more valuable items. The letters were written in acceptance of membership in the Washington and Cresson Literary Society, literary groups active until the 1890's.

Stag's The Style At Freshman Mixer

Stags at a party or dance are usually social outcasts. But not so at the Freshman Mixer which will be given in the Armory from 9 p. m. until midnight on March 6.

In fact the dance, an informal one, is sponsored by the Campus '45 party to be a strictly stag affair. Records will provide the music and an amplifying system will be used.

No admission will be charged, it has been revealed by Renee U. Marks and Walter M. Robinson, freshman co-chairmen. Instead, cash donations will be received and later given to a charity. The co-chairmen said that the arrangements committee for the dance will be announced next week.

This affair will be the second sponsored by the political organization this term.
