We, The Women All Thoughts Don't Pass In The Night

We women often think lots of things which we don't voice. Tonight, however, our courage bolstered by talk about women taking their place in the world, we venture a few opinions.

We wonder why a simple process like getting a book out of the library has become such an inchampions are going to try to out- volved, time-consuming procedo Benedict House by inviting dure. Although inefficiency has been charged and re-charged, nobody has ever done anything about

> About 25 per cent of the time, a much-needed book is lost, misplaced, or at the binders. This information is secured only after a long wait at the desk before somebody casually wanders over to inquire if you want something. We understand that it would be impossible to get all books all the time. But it would be nice if you didn't have to wait quite so long before finding out why you could not have the book.

There has been talk the past two years about the danger of women's walking home alone at night. If there are no available escorts, coeds are told to call the campus patrol. We agree that coeds should not wander about late at night unescorted.

But we also think that calling the campus patrol puts them to unnecessary bother. It seems fairly obvious that a few more lights on camous would help eliminate fear and enable coeds to walk safely home from meetings which don't last too late.

Paradoxically speaking, Atherton Hall is fireproof but it still could burn. Yesterday, what might have been a serious fire was caused by the thoughtlessness of one person who neglected to extinguish completely a cigarette. Unlike most colleges, Penn State does not have smoking rooms located in inconvenient sections of dormitories. Instead, coeds are given almost unlimited privileges. We feel sure they appreciate the convenience. We are equally sure that they should begin to show their appreciation by smoking with a little more care.

There are wars, and campus elections, and Senior Ball weekend, and a little less sugar, but College students still think that anybody who answers a professor in more 'than a monosyllable is "apple-rolishing."

That authentic apple-polishers exist, we don't deny. We do deny, however, that all students who ask questions or enter class discussions fall into this category. It seems silly that most students have a horrible fear of getting what they are paying for-information and education.

Coeds Postpone Marriage Plans

College women, because of defense activities, have been forced to postpone marriage plans, according to a recent poll of the Student Opinion Surveys of America.

A national sampling revealed that while a year ago, at least half of the college students hoped to be married within two years after graduation, today only onethird of them have the same expectation.

Twenty per cent of the women and eighteen per cent of the men Sunday. Call 2919. Ask for Ric. hoped to be married within two years after graduation, and seventeen per cent women and thirteen per cent men within one year.

Although coeds are eager to marry cooner than men, hopes of all students have diminished. Last year, 22 per cent wanted to marry within a year after graduation; there are now only 14 per cent with the same desire.

Figures indicate that, contrary to opinion, the draft did not create a rush to the altar, at least among college students. Last year one per cent were married, and this year the figure did not change.

Engagements, however, have increased. Ten per cent of the women and seven per cent of the men declared that they were engaged to be married. The survey did not indicate whether these students were "ringed" or "pinned," however.

Officers and pledges of Chi Omaga were entertained at dinner at the home of Mrs. F. W. Haller last night.
