We, The Women

War Or No War, Fun's Brewin'

War or no war, there's plenty of fun around if you look for it. Don't be skeptical like the moron who was dared to climb a flashlight beam and replied, "Not on your life, buddy. When I get halfway up you'll turn it off."

As long as copy resembling the following is slipped across the copydesk, America will never lose her sense of humor.

How can you know,
When the branch is bare,
That the seed of a flower
Is blooming there?

How can you tell,
When the wind is cold,
That its border is coated
With dusty mold?

And how can you see,
In the winter's white,
The green of Spring
Far out of sight?

Answer: You can't.

When caught making pattern perforations with a pencil, a frosh home ecker was asked by the instructor why she didn't use tailor tacks. Apologetically, the conscientious student alibied, "I looked in every store in town but couldn't find any." P. S. If you don't get it, see Miss Drummond.

Being an enthusiastic advocator of historical motion pictures, a dormitory hostess recently took off two hours to see "Louisiana Purchase."

Japanese and Nazi militarists should be exposed to the philosophical tidbits of Gorgias, Pyrho, and Descartes, who believed "that all the things I see are fictitious; that none of the objects my memory represents ever existed; that I have no real sense of an outer world: that body with its shape, extension, motion or position, is but a fiction of my mind."

For persons with war jitters, here's a happy prediction. According to Loyall Philips, advertising man, the tire shortage will put America back on her feet.

Collegian Elects Four

Four sophomore women were elected Sunday to Collegian junior editorial board. They are Sally L. Hirshberg, Helen R. Keefauver, Jane H. Murphy, and Mary J. Winter.

Sorority Row at University of Southern California literally threw open its doors to 150 soldiers recently. Each sorority entertained a small group of uniformed men at dinner and a dance.

College Adds 20 Pounds To Coeds

"Every coed gains 20 pounds during her college career," according to a group of leading beauty authorities. Such is the standard bugaboo used to intimidate incoming frosh.

But in spite of this added avoirdupois, coeds lead the nation in approximating ideal measurements, as evidenced in a survey conducted recently by the experts. Here is the record as compiled from a cross-section of campuses over the country: weight, 120; height, 5 feet 3 inches; bust, 35; waist, 25; and hips, 36.

Averages for women of all ages throughout the nation, as collected in the research are: weight, 133; height, 5 feet, 3 inches; bust, 36; waist, 29; and hips, 38.
