

College Politicians Enter Home-Stretch Campaign

All-College President

WILLIAM C. MAZZOCCO (I)

Voting Begins Tuesday; Ballot On Constitution

Political campfires started roaring as weekend campaigning hit the ceiling and Campus and Independent cliques counted only three more days of active "soap-boxing" before elections next Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday.

Voting will take place in the first floor lounge, Old Main, on Tuesday and Wednesday, 12:30 to 8 p. m., and on Thursday from 9:30 a. m. to 8:30 p. m. Voting machines will be used to speed up the balloting.

Contrary to former years, the A.A. books will not be needed to vote. This new rule was initiated to create a larger voting group. Instead of punching the A.A. books, the elections committee will hand slips of paper bearing class numerals to voters and the slips will be collected at the voting machines.

Other questions which will be brought before the All-College voters will be the revised All-College Constitution and voting upon the independent men and women representatives on All-College Cabinet.

The independent men candidates will be Richard S. Kurtz '43 and John C. York '43. The independent women on the slate have been announced on page four.

The revised constitution, submitted by Ross B. Lehman '42, chairman of the Committee on By-laws and Amendments, had its third reading and was passed by the All-College Cabinet last Wednesday at a special meeting.

Approximately 15 changes were made in the constitution, but most of them were old amendments and by-laws which had not been included in the present printed constitution. A few other measures were passed to help facilitate the present College war emergency program.

In the race for All-College President, Jerome H. Blakeslee, Campus, and William C. Mazzocco, Independent, will compete down the home stretch. Their running mates are Glenn W. Ely, Independent, and Jess V. Fardella, Campus.

New Way Needed To Teach Driving

With dad unwilling to trust the now irreplaceable family car to the hands of an inexperienced driver, and hesitant about using "precious" rubber for driving lessons, some other facilities must be made available if junior and his sister are to learn to drive.

That is the observation of Amos E. Neyhart, administrative head of the Institute of Public Safety at the Pennsylvania State College and a pioneer in the field of driver training for young people. He is also a consultant for the American Automobile Association.

"Traditionally American boys and girls have had free access to the family automobile as soon as they reach the legal driving age," he pointed out. "As a result most of our young people are able to drive by the time they are graduated from high school. Tire and gasoline rationing, however, may put an end to this.

"Yet in spite of these conditions," Mr. Neyhart continued, "it is more important than ever that our young people know how to drive. Certainly the mechanized

Tribunal By-Law Made Final By Amendment

Membership of Student Tribunal has been officially changed by Article III, section 2 of the revised constitution so that two junior members instead of one are appointed to the judicial body along with five instead of six senior members. This method has actually been in effect for the past year under a by-law passed last Spring.

One of the junior members is to be elected Tribunal chairman for the following year by the senior members. All appointments are to be made by the All-College president subject to the approval of Cabinet.

Reason for the change is to make the chairmanship of Tribunal competitive between the junior members instead of having the one junior member automatically become chairman as was the case under the old constitution. In this way it is felt that better Tribunal chairmen will be selected because of the possible choice.

Spring is one time when we don't admire pluck—that ruins nature.

Carpenter To Speak

Dr. Clarence R. Carpenter, associate psychology professor, will lecture on the "Behavior of Rhesus Monkeys" at a meeting sponsored by the pre-med society in the Home Economics Auditorium at 7 p. m. tomorrow. Movies will accompany the lecture which is open to the public.

Fraternity Election

Theta Kappa Phi recently held its elections. The officers are Joseph V. Sweterlitsch '43, president; Lawrence D. Gent '44, vice-president; Richard D. Michel '43, treasurer; C. William Sick '43, secretary; and Harry W. Wills '43, caterer.

army that we are developing requires that every soldier be familiar with motor vehicle operation."

Revision Clarifies Rule On Office Succession

The succession change made in Article II, section 14 states that in the event that both the All-College president and vice-president either resign or are disqualified, a general election shall be held to elect a new All-College president within four weeks of the regular College sessions after the disqualification or resignation.

The old constitution stated that under such circumstances, the senior class president would act as chairman of Cabinet for the rest of the semester. However, with present conditions making it more likely that such a problem might arise, it is felt that it would be better to elect a new All-College president rather than give the senior class president such an extra load.
