The accelerated, three-semester program is Penn State's major contribution to America's war efforts. For the duration, it is to be regarded as a normal and not a special program of study.

Two Recommendations

Several problems—one that has grown from the present national emergency, and another that has arisen out of the inviting Spring weather—were temporarily solved by two recommendations, which were passed at this week's All-College Cabinet meeting.

In conjunction with numerous requests from the Administration, Cabinet unanimously passed a recommendation asking the Campus Patrol to cooperate in "preserving the proper student attire and conduct on front campus during the Summer semester."

One of the Administration officers has suggested that students refrain from excessive "twos-ing" on campus grass because many elderly visitors may get the wrong impression of Penn State as they walk across the lawn in front of Old Main. The Patrol may be able to restrict this conduct to a certain extent, but the matter is more a personal one, just as mixed drinking is primarily a problem for the individual.

The other recommendation of Cabinet dealt with the combined defense stamp-corsage plan which failed miserably at Junior Prom last weekend. Again, Cabinet did not pass strict legislation, but only suggested that all students cooperate by substituting defense themes for corsages at All-College dances for the duration of the war.

In both cases, the final action is reserved for the individual, but Cabinet hopes that both recommendations will be considered as well as applied by students who understand the worthwhile objective behind the two measures.

The State At War

Led by Penn State's defense training program, which is now recognized as the largest in the nation, the state of Pennsylvania has forged ahead among the leaders of America's war effort.

Drexel Institute is conducting the first aerial bombardment protection course in the Philadelphia area, while the University of Pennsylvania Medical School will graduate 125 new doctors one month ahead of schedule in order to help meet the great need for physicians in the armed services.

Temple University's chiropody clinic will treat without charge the foot ailments of all servicemen in uniform for the duration, while at Grove City a detachment of 75 marines is going into training.

In our own back yard once again, it is to be noted that the coat hanger campaign is scheduled for today. Any student, who has several of these old wire hangers in the closet of his rooming or fraternity house, should take them along when going to class, and drop them at the collection center in front of Old Main.

These coat hangers will then be packed and mailed to the New Cumberland Reception Center, where the boys in the Army will put them to good use.

This Grim Business

Even the grueling task of waging a war has an occasional novel story incident to its prosecution. The story develops that all British Naval men stationed in Washington under the regulations of their government must officially be carried on the records as attached to some particular vessel.

The official address of a number of men assigned to shore duty in the Washington area happens to be H. M. S. Saker, which is revealed as a small motor boat operating out of Halifax. If all her "crew", now stationed in Washington, would attempt to board the small craft, she would undoubtedly sink without any encouragement from shells or torpedoes.

Lion Tales

After four years of guiding the destinies of women at beautiful Penn State, some of the best known BWOC's whipped off to celebrate their freedom, their right to live normal lives . . . they went to the Skellar. To them the following ode is most humbly dedicated.

Final Fling

Four long years they held the fort,
They guided dear WSGA.
A rest they needed of a sort
So declared a holiday.

BWOC's en masse one day
Threw off the yoke and flew
Down to Doggie's they did stray
To enjoy a belated brew.

—Amen.

Questions, No Answers

Will Dave McAleer, senior class prexy, and Fran Haley compose the biggest bigshot duo on campus after Murray and Finn leave these portals; will Margie Campsey find another to replace Paul Frey; will Becky Rupp become a blonde or brownette; will Kim Grimm be moidered if his KKG keyhole isn't found. Answers in the next installment, maybe.

Shortcut To Love

In faraway New York gentle people formed a society to answer coed wailings because men are shouldering rifles instead of curly locks these days. To Lucille Barton and Eleanor Freedman the U. S. mail brought circulars. "Join our society," they read. "We guarantee to find you a mate, and we aim to please all classes." That's one way.

Farewell Brethren

A sad goodbye we bid to those departing for places unknown. We'll miss Bob Jeffries, for whom the ROTC uniform was made; Jean Babcock and Jeanne Stiles, the women behind the women; Lennie Krouse, the all-around guy; Betty Zeigler, for whom White Hall will mourn; Tommy Henson, God rest his soul; Tommy Allison, will there ever be another DU like him; Dean Fullerton, the idle chatter boy. So long. And may Uncle Sam bless and keep you.

Watts Hall Genius

Residents of Watts Hall show signs of genius or something now and then. Nowadays when the telephone rings they answer, "This is Watts. Who in the Hall do you want?"

Kappa Sigmas

Seek Queen

Kappa Sigmas are in a quandary. They don't know whether they want Betty Grable, Rosalind Russell, Gene Tierney, Rita Hayworth, or some other Hollywood figure as their sweetheart.

Contrary to a previous statement, Dorothy Lamour has not been chosen as the national Kappa Sig sweetheart, although she may have led the field in earlier voting. As yet, only 60 per cent of the national Kappa Sigma votes have been turned in.

However, William J. McKnight III, president of the Penn State chapter, who will fly to Hollywood to pin the winning sweetheart, said that final results should be known by Saturday.

McKnight expects to make the trip to the West Coast with Lowell Thomas, Kappa Sigma alumnus, at the end of this month or the beginning of June.
