

'Be Natural,' Greeks Advise

By JANE H. MURPHY '44

Naturalness is the key to a coed's success in the Greek whirl, according to a sorority coed's edition of "How To Win Friends and Influence People."

For daily dutch treat coke dates and informal gatherings during free association, coeds look best in ordinary school clothes. Cottons and saddle shoes are tops here.

Open houses, which come on Wednesday, June 25, and Wednesday, July 1, are not dressy affairs. Attired in campus casuals, frosh and transfers may stay at each house for not more than a half hour, according to the Panhel code. They may visit as many houses as they wish.

To be "in place" at informal parties during the week of July 13 to 17, it is suggested that those invited wear cottons or silks with spectators or sport heels. If invitations specify other informal attire, Greeks say guests should dress as advised.

Evening gowns and afternoon formals will be the thing at Panhellenic's first formal coffee hour to be held Saturday, July 18. Summer frills and light colors will fill the bill.

Chapel and church dates, prohibited last rushing season, demand hats, Summer silks, or their equivalents; but with all, sorority sisters count most on trimness and personality.

Authorities state that when the code specifies dutch treating, women concerned should do as the Dutch do. Greeks also urge that coeds attend only one informal party a night, and that they RSVP by phone on receipt of the invitation.

Cwens Will Sell Flowers At Dance

Carnations will be sold at the Cwens Dance in an effort to save corsage money and to make a defense donation to the WSSF, it was decided at a meeting of the sophomore women's honorary, yesterday.

First semi-formal of the Summer semester, the dance will be held from 9 p. m. to midnight Saturday, June 27. "Here's your chance to pay back those past dates," Mary Grace Longenecker '45, president, suggested.

Using the center front entrance of White Hall, couples are asked to buy flowers for "her" dress and "his" lapel, according to Miss Longenecker. The World Student Service Fund, to which the contributions will be sent, provides for students in concentration camps and others due to the war.

Dance theme will be a medieval scene, characteristic of the annual affairs, Patricia Deiner '45, decorations chairman, announced.

Theta Phi Alpha will entertain patronesses at a tea at 2 p. m. Sunday.

Women In Sports

With M. J. WINTER

WRA Co-Rec Day has received a great deal of publicity, and it deserves all it gets. So does Adele Levin, in charge of the program, and all coeds who have worked with her to make co-recreation at Penn State a reality instead of an idealistic plan for a way to while away car-less Summer days.

Here in the Nittany Valley a large group of active students are gathered with little opportunity to socialize except to frequent movies, fraternity houses, and make up their own sports programs. Often the golf course and tennis courts are crowded to capacity when students do get the urge to play on them.

Co-Rec Day is helping to fill a need for organized sports competition between men and women students. If enough students come out this afternoon and show sufficient interest in the program, we urge WRA and other College organizations to take their cue and plan more co-recreation programs during the Summer.

With emphasis throughout the country on better physical fitness, WRA is doing its part with programs for a "Hale Penn State."

It may seem a little late, but we'd like to bring to attention the work of several students last Spring. While other coeds were Lohrke '45, croquet; Dora E. Colver '44 and swimming club members hostesses for events around White Hall; Helen D. McKee '44, novelty games and physical education majors, volley ball.

Refreshments will be for sale in front of White Hall, and there will be a table where coeds may sign up for WRA activities clubs.

The WRA Bowling Club is sponsoring a coed cabin party to the WRA Cabin, leaving White Hall at 6:45 this evening. Carol M. Gorman '45 and Georgeanna M. Holt '45 are in charge. Hikers will return by 10 a. m. tomorrow, and they are reminded by the co-chairmen to bring 20 cents for breakfast.

All students must sign up at Student Union by noon today for the co-rec bicycle breakfast hike to the WRA Cabin. Sponsored by WRA Outing Club, hikers will leave the Miles street bicycle shop at 6:30 a. m. tomorrow and will return by 10 a. m., according to Lois C. Lohrke '45, club president, in charge of the hike. There will be a charge of 50 cents for bikes and 15 cents for breakfast.

Coeds at Benedict Home Management House will hold a buffet supper for their dates at 6 p. m. today.

picnicking, going to movies, or just taking it easy, Ann Drivas, WRA president, and Jeanne Irwin, All-College tennis champion, spent Saturday afternoons at Laurelton State Village. They thought up the idea of bringing planned recreation to delinquent women at the Village. Sarah Jane Jackson, Rosiland Nelson, and PSCA co-workers helped in the work.

Results showed that the inmates were delighted with the program provided, and as a result, a permanent position for a recreational teacher is being provided at Laurelton.

More projects of this nature in surrounding communities will help give the College a more prominent place in the lives of the residents of the state.

We, The Women Penn State Coeds Fail Uncle Sam

While men all over the country are preparing for war and fighting overseas, Penn State coeds are calmly sipping cokes in the Sandwich Shop or sunbathing on Atherton Hall terrace.

Yes, we are referring once again to the lack of response given the airplane and ship drafting courses offered by the School of Engineering.

For about a month now, posters have been on display in all campus buildings, editorials have been written, and pamphlets have been issued stressing the need for trained men and women in war industries. These mediums are advertising a course in airplane drafting with no prerequisites, and free of tuition, fees, and equipment expense.

To date, five coeds have been interested enough to enroll.

Unable to present the course unless 18 students register for it, the engineering department has a budget allowing them to buy equipment for 48 persons.

We don't know whether your apparent lack of seriousness is due to the usual fear of difficult courses connected with the Engineering School, or whether you just don't feel obligated in any way to pay back some of the public born education you have accepted up to now.

Prof. B. Kenneth Johnstone, head of the architecture department, insures you that the work is not too difficult for men and women of college calibre, and claims that a similar course was presented to high school students last Summer.

We understand, according to human nature, that people are selfish and very rarely want to "give" instead of "take." But we wish to point out that by signing up for these courses, you will not only be helping to solve a problem of vital national importance, but learning a good life trade as well.

Enrollment deadline is Wednesday. You may register at Student Union or in Room 301 Main Engineering. Classes will meet whenever it is most convenient for the majority of students.

You are under no compulsion to accept offered employment at the end of a course.

Reports from the Martin Bomber Plant in Baltimore reveal that trained persons are being employed at the rate of 1,000 a week. Airplane industries are paying trained employees average salaries of 40 dollars a week.

With a nine million dollar appropriation from Congress for defense training courses throughout the country and with faculty members working overtime with little extra compensation, we hope that Penn State women will come through for themselves, for their College, and for national defense.

Sophomore Council Freshman To Organize Forum Activities

Members of the Sophomore Advisory Council of the Freshman Women's Forum who met yesterday to outline Summer plans for the Forum include Miriam L. Zartman, chairman, H. Elizabeth Furst, Jean B. Ogden, Barbara C. Painter, Myrrel H. Rewbridge, Claire L. Weaver, and Barbara R. Wells.

Officers and secretaries will be elected in the Hugh Beaver Room, Old Main at 7 p. m. Tuesday, June 23, and presented on June 30 in a series of skits.

On July 7, a professor's, a BMOC's, and a BWOC's viewpoint of the "ideal coed" will be discussed when Dr. Henry L. Yeagley, Charles H. Ridenour, Tribunal Head; and Marjorie L. Sykes, WSGA Judicial chairman, address the Forum.

A hay ride to the PSCA cabin and the installation of freshman officers will be held July 14.

Ruth H. Zang, assistant dean of women, will talk on "Boy and Girl Relations" at a joint meeting of Freshman Men's Council and Freshman Women's Forum on July 21.

A new and practical plan has been adopted in reference to the freshmen entering the College in September. Second semester-freshmen officers will act as sophomores in advising the incoming freshmen.

Freshman women who signed up for committees include publicity: Lorraine Bender, Jeanette Ehlers, Nancy Musser, and Betty Pike; program: Ann Harwick, Marian Higgins, Mary K. Hoppel, Betsy Merkel, Sally Schmidt, and Dorothy Widmer; worship: Barbara Anderson, Ruth Bamer, Laura Jean Davis, Nancy Ferris, Betty Funkhauser, Beverly Logg, Fern Mounitz, and Ruth Peilmeier.

Service: Helen Barr, Norma Bartoli, Peggy Stauffer, and Miriam Yacos; social: Patricia Borman, Dorothy Callahan, Fern Dillon, Louise Dunmire, Peggy Fail-

Nomination and election of hall officers will be held in freshman dormitories Monday night, announced Patricia Diener, sophomore WSGA senator, in charge of freshman orientation. McAllister Hall meeting is scheduled for 9 p. m. and Woman's Building at 9:30 p. m.

Hall presidents automatically become members of Freshman Council which serves as a medium through which WSGA Senate contacts freshman women. Other Council representatives will be freshman senator and freshman WSGA Judicial Committee representative.

Council will hold an organization meeting Thursday, June 25, according to Miss Diener, who will act as Council chairman.

Freshman senator will be nominated at a compulsory meeting for freshman women in 110 Home Economics Building at 6:30 p. m. Tuesday. Nomination of WRIA representative will also be held at this time. Elections will follow June 30.

"To promote fellowship among campus and town coeds, freshman coeds living in town have been assigned dorm mates from McAllister Hall and Woman's Building," Miss Diener said.

SDT To Be Honored At National Convention

Special recognition will be given to the recently pledged Penn State chapter of Sigma Delta Tau at the national convention at French Lick, Ind., Tuesday through Friday. Muriel R. Meiselman '43, pledge chapter president, will leave tomorrow for the conference. Annual awards will be made and election and installation of national officers will be conducted.
