

Cwens Sell Over 200 Tickets For Semi-Formal Tonight

Carnations Replace Ordinary Corsages

Over 200 dance tickets have been sold to date, and the last chance to buy will be at noon today when Cwens sell them in McAllister Hall lobby after lunch, according to Mary Grace Longenecker '45, president of the sophomore women's honorary.

First semi-formal of the year, the annual Cwens dance will be held in White Hall from 9 o'clock to midnight tonight. George Washko's Campus Owls will play at the affair, the theme of which will be medieval, Jean E. Ogden '45, general chairman, announced.

In an effort to be "all out" for defense, Cwens have decided to sell carnations at the door as a substitute for corsages. Flower sale returns will go to the WSSF, a fund for World Student Service used for students in stricken war areas.

Dance proceeds, according to custom, will go toward the Cwens scholarship fund, which gives annual $50 awards to deserving sophomore coeds, according to Miss Mary Jane Stevenson, assistant to the dean of women and Cwens advisor.

Dance committees and freshman chairmen are program, Florinne E. Olson, chairman, and Barbara Painter, checking, R. Christine Yohe, chairman, and Ruth Steiner; invitations, Miriam L. Zartman, chairman, and Vivian I. Martin; publicity, Ruth Clyde, chairman, Carolyn Emerick, and Alice E. Drumm; and decorations, Patricia Diener, chairman, Ruth A. Embury, Julia H. McFarland, and Kathleen M. Osgood.

Miss Longenecker urges freshmen to use their one o'clocks for the dance tonight. "Even though it's not leap year, coeds should ask their men," she said.

Persons attending the dance are asked to use the center front entrance of White Hall.

Two Coeds Enter Golf Tournament

Janet L. Fleming '43, who did not return for the Summer semester, and Marge King '42 participated in the two-day Cambridge Springs invitation golf tournament in Pittsburgh Wednesday and Thursday.

WRA Golf Club will hold regular practices at the Caddy House Tuesdays and Thursdays at 3 p. m., Adele J. Levin '44, acting president announced. All coeds are invited by Miss Levin to attend.

Vivian I. Martin '45, WRA Bowling Club vice-president, will act as president since the resignation of Martha J. Haverstick '43, former Club head.

Coed Models Display Sports, Dress, Formal Clothes For Campus

With the Land Grant Mural as a background, the fashion show, featured as part of Old Main Open House, took place in Old Main lobby last night despite the weather man's efforts to "dissuade" plans.

Clothes modeled included active sports, spectator-sports, dress, and evening, apparel suitable for campus wear.

Most practical, yet decorative, sports ensemble was modeled by E. Jane Windell '44. She wore a white sharkskin tennis suit with a plain tailored top graced by a pleated skirt.

Other coeds who modeled active sports clothes were Pauline E. Keller '43, Mary E. Gilbert '45, Kathleen M. Osgood '45, Barbara C. Painter '45, and Yvette Bernak '46.

Kathryn K. Metzger '45 featured the classic seersucker two-piece suit so popular with coeds throughout the country. Her jacket was tailored with a slit back. A white dickey completed the outfit. Betty J. Lyman '45 wore a light blue checked gingham dirndl trimmed with white pique, an ideal spectator-sports outfit.

Additional girls who modeled spectator sports clothes were Nancy J. Zartman '43, Ruth A. Embury '45, Betty J. Lyman '45, Miriam L. Zartman '45, Miss Bernak, Miss Painter, and Miss Schautz.

Nancy Zartman modeled a white waffle pique classic with heavy lace at the neck in a yoke effect as a date dress. Gowns were modeled by Miss Keller, Margaret M. Lams '43, Nancy Zartman, Virginia E. Manley, and Miss Metzger.

Included in the finale were patriotic bathing suits of red, white, and blue colors, worn by Miss Lyman, Miss Manley, and Miriam L. Zartman.

We, The Women Albright Coeds Are Getting The Best

Next year's coeds at Albright College will be most fortunate. They will have as their dean a wise and progressive woman who possesses both understanding and a sense of humor.

They will be guided by a woman who has done much for Penn State coeds personally, as well as in a professional capacity.

We have been talking about Miss Mary Jane Stevenson, assistant to Miss Ray, who will become dean of women at Albright in September.

What happens to freshman women when Senior Sponsors call meetings? Numerous times within the past two weeks, an upper-class woman has contacted her group, prepared orientation material—all for nothing, because the frosh never showed up.

No Senior Sponsor pretends to know all the answers, but each of them knows a few which would prove of value to frosh. They know them because they have spent three years on this campus and because they have taken special training in orientation work.

All freshmen are not guilty of such definite discourtesy. It's time that those who are "wise up."

College Presents Wartime Courses

To meet wartime community needs and to consider the services which the College should offer women students in connection with the war, a faculty committee appointed for this purpose has organized courses in home economics, Red Cross work, and health education.

Home Economics 308.42 is a one-credit course in family health. Under the direction of Miss Alice M. Chubb, superintendent of the infirmary, the class will meet in Room 17 Home Economics at 4:10 Monday and at 3:10 Thursday. A Red Cross Home Nursing course leading to a Red Cross certificate will meet in the same room from 3:10 to 5 o'clock Tuesday and Friday.

Health Education 403.43, a three-credit course, including first aid, athletic conditioning and training, will be given daily from July 20 to August 7 by Mr. John W. Hulme, instructor in physical education.

Women In Sports

By M. J. WINTER '44

Students are often inclined to be blase, or at least they appear to be. However, another side of their personalities was shown Thursday night when they let their hair down at the folk dancing session in Recreation Hall. Everyone seemed to enjoy it.

WRA should be commended for bringing an informal evening of relaxation to students, faculty, and townspeople. With more than 400 present, there can be no doubt that people enjoy square dancing.

Albert E. Haynes, caller at the affair, was only here for a week, teaching a concentrated intersession course in Early American dancing. He had the qualities needed by a caller—personality, timing, and an easily understood voice.

Physical education instructors are in favor of having more such dances this Summer. But, unless a suitable caller is available, repetitions of last night's performance will probably not be forthcoming.

Certainly there is someone on campus or in State College who could qualify as a caller to lead square dancing. Weekly or bi-weekly dances this Summer would add a great deal to recreational enjoyment, not only of townspeople and regular College students, but of Summer Session students who will appreciate a means of meeting people in an informal atmosphere.

Alpha Epsilon Phi will entertain Phi Epsilon Pi members at a winter roast at the home of Mrs. Charles Schlow from 6 to 8 p. m. tomorrow. Yetta Fromison '44 is in charge.

WSGA 'Bars For Tars' Bring Mail From USS Atlanta Fan

WSGA has been receiving fan mail from the U. S. Navy for their performances in the Bars for Tars Day, sponsored by WSGA House of Representatives last Spring, and for WSGA's Army-Navy Dance staged in Rec Hall last month.

Candy bars collected as admission to the dance and those collected on Bars for Tars Day, which were sent to men in service, were deeply appreciated if the letter written by Cayford Holt, of the USS Atlanta, is any indication.

Following is Holt's letter as sent to WSGA:

USS Atlanta
c-o Postmaster
San Francisco, Calif.

Dear Coeds:

We got your candy all in one piece (that was candy, wasn't it?), and enjoyed it very much—what we could scrape off the paper. I wish, though, that the mailman would quit standing on packages to hang pictures of Jane Russell.

Seriously tho, the cavity meat was strictly on the beam. My sweet tooth is still aching. We have a mascot, a real chow hound, who managed to make himself miserable on your contribution.

His name is "Lucky" and, so far, he has been just that. He is the ship's pet and we even have a life-jacket and a liberty card for him. He has a battle station and an abandoned ship station, and sometimes I think he is the best sailor we have. Like most mutts, tho, he hates to take a bath—and that dog can get into more paint!

We are whipping the pants off the Japs, so don't worry about that boyfriend of yours who cuts a mean rug at the U. S. O. We don't need an army. All those guys are good for is to furnish material for cartoons. We'll have all the dictatorships on their knees before those boys learn which end of a rifle the bullet comes from.

Okay, okay Take it easy! So your boyfriend's in the army. I'm sorry I said anything about your little graftee. You can bet your last Artie Shaw record that I would trade places with him. While we're kicking the "heil" out of the axis, they're kicking up splinters to the tune of Benny Goodman.

I'll bet it's pretty back there this time of year. I'd give a lot to see Spring in the East.

Who, me? I'm free, white, and 23. Five feet, nine and a half inches of muscle and brawn (under the fat). I like swing music, guns, photography, drawing, deer hunting, Thorne Smith books, and swimming. Born in Maine, I was weaned on a radio station in Connecticut where I held the glamorous position of control-room operator. Joined the Navy to see the world—gee, I never knew there was that much water!

I hope that between these not-too-well written lines you have been able to gather that we are deeply grateful for your thoughtfulness. As long as we live, you have our promise that the good old U. S. A. will never be a battlefield. If you feel inclined to drop us a line, mail means a lot to us and we will answer all letters as promptly as possible. Thanks again for everything.

Sincerely,
Cayford E. Holt, RM2C
"C" Division

Alpha Omicron Pi will entertain the ensigns at an informal supper next Tuesday evening.
