

Collegian To Show Free War Films

Inaugurating a series of motion pictures sponsored by The Daily Collegian in cooperation with the College Book Store and Hillel Foundation, two films entitled "Road to Victory" and "Warning" will be shown at Hillel Foundation at 8 p. m. next Wednesday.

The pictures show the various phases of the present war through action shots that have been taken in all parts of the world—India, Libya, Belgium, London, Dunkirk, and the Mediterranean, to mention only a few.

The series, starting next Wednesday, will continue until the end of the semester, and will include such topics as "Thunder Over the Orient," "Russia's Millions Mobilize," "Australia Marches With Britain," "Americans All," and "Germany Under Hitler."

All students, faculty members, and townspeople are invited to see the pictures which will be shown free of charge.

"It is our sincere hope that everyone interested in the pictures will attend," Gordon L. Coy, Collegian editor, said last night.

"We are attempting to portray various aspects of the war to people in State College," he explained.

PSK Scores Shutout Over AXR To Gain Section Title

Mushball Leagues Reach Midway Point In Tilts

Hurling a brilliant 2-hitter, Arnold virtually clinched the Section 2 title for Phi Sigma Kappa as he shut out the Alpha Chi Rhos 13 to 0. With one game still to play in that league, Alpha Chi Sigma vs. Beaver House, Bob Redmount '44, manager, said that its outcome would not deprive the Phi Sigs of top spot.

Title holders have now been decided in every league with the exception of Section 4. However, Monday's scheduled battle between Phi Delta Theta and Phi Kappa Psi will decide the outcome.

With only those two games left to play, the Fraternity Leagues will have completed the first half of the intramural mushball program. Reorganization will follow Monday's tilts, with seedings being made according to present standings.

Perennial champs, the Canal St. Firehouse squad is leading the Independent race as the midway point was reached in last night's games. Following them by one contest is the Matils squad.

In addition to Phi Sigma Kappa's deciding game last night, Delta Sigma Phi humiliated Sigma Nu, 12 to 5. Lyons allowed 5 budding hits, but the Sigma Nus converted every one into a run.

The only other Fraternity game saw Sigma Phi Alpha gain a victory via a forfeit over Theta Chi.

Yeoman work by McGill, m undsman for Watts Hall, provided the spark that enabled his team to trample Matils, 4 to 2, while the Jordan Hall aggregation swept over the Electric Diner, 7 to 2. Sundback emerged victorious over Batz, losing pitcher.

Monday's schedule follows:

Lion Trackmen Leave Today For Army-Navy Meet

Assisting in an attempt to keep track in the national spotlight and continue interest in a sport that plays an important part in physical fitness, Chick Werner will take eight runners to Scheilkopf Field at Cornell this Saturday to compete in an exhibition track meet.

With Cornell, Penn State, Colgate, and Syracuse competing in the six special events, the meet's proceeds will go to Army-Navy Relief.

Only real veteran on Chick's makeshift squad is Barney Plessner, senior hurdler, who will compete with Ed Young in the 120-yard high hurdles. Main force in the middle distance events is the freshman trio of Cliff St. Clair, Bill Shuman, and Jerry Karver, all record breakers in frosh competition during the past Spring.

Although the competition is unknown, Karver, 4:21.1 mile runner, will have a good chance of taking the longest and feature event in the program at a time when discussion of the mile run has leaped to prominence in the track world after Gunner Hagg, Swedish distance star, turned in a world's record-breaking 4:06.2 performance.

Other participants in the meet for State will be Marty Schiff and Bob Jones in the sprints and Mac Smith in the half-mile run.

Liberal Arts Courses Play Part In Teaching Students Why We Fight

Teaching students why we are fighting is fully as important as teaching them how to fight and how to make machines of destruction, according to Dr. William S. Dye, head of the department of English literature.

In urging continued emphasis on Liberal Arts studies, Dr. Dye warned against the danger of over-stressing technical courses to the exclusion of those studies which analyze the bases of our democracy.

"In a democracy, transforming men into automatons is unthinkable," he said. "Therefore Liberal Arts studies are necessary to provide reasons for action."

Easier communication has made warfare possible on three fronts, Dr. Dye pointed out. These fronts, none of which can be underestimated, are the battle front, the economic front, and the propaganda or "idea" front.

Scientific and technical schools are, of course, necessary to produce the sinews of war, but it is the liberal studies which instill the ideals for which men work and fight, he added. Both the economic front, with its questions of finance and distribution of raw materials, and the idea front are in the field of liberal arts.

Especially is this true of languages which provide a medium for understanding the propaganda of our enemies through radio, and for the dissemination of our own propaganda, the literature head went on to say.

Freedom of political choice, freedom of thought, and freedom of religion are all in the realm of ideas, and on their proper interpretation rests the value of the post-war world, Dr. Dye believes.

"Dealing with material things and dealing with ideas are not mutually exclusive," he pointed out. "They edge into each other's fields, and praise of one does not mean disparagement of the other."

"Already the dissemination of ideas has played a large part in this conflict, and the future will make even greater demands on those whose cultural background will determine the course of future generations," he concluded.
