

Bibles, PSCA News Sent To Incoming Freshmen

Student handbooks, as well as copies of the PSCA News, were mailed to members of the Freshman class, yesterday, the office of the Christian Association stated last night.

Freshman Politicians Will Face Busy Fall Semester

'46 Class Elections Set Within 2 Months

With two elections for Class of '46 officers scheduled within less than two months, freshman politicians face a busy season with the opening of the Fall semester.

Donald W. Davis, chairman of the All-College Elections committee, stated last night that October 9 has been tentatively set as the date for the freshman officer voting. The political mass meeting for the introduction of candidates, which precedes each election, is scheduled for October 6 and official campaigns will run between these two dates. Davis stated that all these dates are subject to All-College Cabinet's approval.

In November the freshmen will again vote for class officers, this time at the All-College elections for sophomore class positions.

Since both the June and September entering groups combined are considered the official freshman class, the Elections committee, with the approval of Cabinet, decided to postpone freshman elections until both groups could participate in the balloting.

Though some organization of the political parties, Campus and Independent, has taken place this Summer, complete organization will not be made until next month with both frosh groups eligible to hold clique positions. Freshmen interested in working in one of the parties should watch for announcements of meetings soon after the start of the Fall term.

At both of the Fall '46 elections both groups of freshmen will be eligible to vote and to run for office. In this respect the elections committee has made an exception for the '46 class. In the political setup of all other classes only students with second semester standing will be eligible to be

Warnock Welcomes

Dean of Men A. R. Warnock has this to say to the incoming freshmen: "In many respects, we are accelerating to serve the interests of new students and our country, but we expect to keep alive most of the worthy characteristics and traditions of Penn State life. During freshman week, the freshmen will have an opportunity to make the acquaintance of these, candidates for election. Both class groups will be eligible to vote in all classes.

The freshman elections code, which is now being revised by Cabinet, will be announced sometime early next month. This will contain rules governing the October balloting.

Student Leaders Start 2nd Speed-up Program

Starting its second semester set-up is the All-College under the College's accelerated Cabinet. Cabinet is made up of program, Penn State's student All-College president and vice-government organization will function under the same heads and policies as it did this semester.

Because it has been so well demonstrated during the Summer semester that the student government was such a great help in maintaining student morale and keeping the academic front running smoothly, College authorities and faculty are looking forward to much of the same type of help during the rest of the war-time program.

Backbone of the student gov-ment is the All-College president, president of the Athletic Association, chairman of Interclass Finance Board, president of Women's Student Government Association, a representative of Forensics Council, president of Women's Recreation Association, president of Interfraternity Council, presidents of the student councils of the College's seven undergraduate schools, editor of The Daily Collegian, presidents of the four classes a representative of independent women, president of Panhellenic council, and president of IMA.
