

Bischoff Plans Extensive Intramural Program

Football, Swimming X-Country Set For Fall

In cooperation with the National movement for physical fitness, Eugen C. Bischoff, director of the College's intramural sports program, announced last night that the interfraternity and independent tournaments will be more numerous this Fall.

Football, cross-country, and swimming tournaments are already being planned for and Mr. Bischoff explained that there are possibilities that basketball, boxing, and wrestling tourneys will take place this semester.

The court, ring, and mat competitions were started near the end of the first semester and completed during the second term under the normal semester plan. However, the IM director stated that in order to give seniors opportunities to compete in them, tentative plans call for the completion of them by December.

If this proposition is worked out, separate tournaments in these three sports will also be run off during the semester beginning in January.

Fraternity and independent teams will engage in separate six-man touch football tournaments. Most of these contests will be run off under the arc lights on the practice gridiron, New Beaver Field. Mr. Bischoff said that he hopes with the aid of the new war-time to have some of these games played in the late afternoon on the golf courses fields. No definite dates have been set for the tourney's beginning.

The cross-country run is scheduled sometime in October. Participants in this event are generally required to make a number of practice runs over the course before they are eligible for entry.

Glennland pool will be the scene of the round-robin swimming competition.

Just what type of awards will be made has not yet been decided, according to Director Bischoff. Trophies for the championship teams will be impossible to get because of government bans on them. He also remarked that the College's present supply of individual medal awards has been exhausted with possibilities of getting more not promising. Present plans call for the awarding of some type of certificates or plaques to the winning teams. "We'll have to manage on what we can get," he explained.

In addition to the intramural program's emphasis on physical fitness, Dean Carl P. Schott, head of the School of Physical Education and Athletics, is planning a toughened required physical education course for freshmen and sophomores as well as an optional program for upperclassmen.

'Library Is A Summons To Scholarship' Quotation Beckons Frosh To Use Building

On the front of the main library there is a quotation that reads, "The Library Is A Summons To Scholarship." And how well the Freshmen are going to realize that in the next few weeks.

An imposing edifice of four floors with separate rooms for everything connected with study and books, the library is one of the buildings completed in 1939.

Housing 250,000 volumes, including everything imaginable in print, the bookworm's dream is run on the Dewey Decimal System.

College Will Change Job Hunters Flag Policy To Suit National Code Rule To Register At CA

No longer will the American flag which flies daily from the west pole on Old Main lawn be half-masted upon the death of members of the Board of Trustees, the faculty, staff, or the student body, as has been the custom for many years.

Wilmer E. Kenworthy, executive secretary to the President, announced recently that according to a public statement by the chairman of the National Flag Code Committee, Gridley Adams, this practice is contrary to accepted practice.

The committee's ruling reads, "The flag should be half-staffed only for persons who have once offered their lives in its defense—never for any other person except by Presidential authority. For State or City officials, half-staff the State or City flag."

That means that only the popular fiction and non-fiction are on a display shelf. All the other books are shelved in the stacks. To obtain a book, one merely looks up its call number in one of the catalogues, and then gives the needed information to one of the library workers behind the desk.

The librarians look up the book in a card file—if no card is there the book is in, and they go into the stacks and obtain it for you.

Freshmen and upperclassmen, interested in working at part-time jobs during the coming semester, are asked to fill application blanks in the Penn State Christian Association's Employment Bureau, 304 Old Main.

D. Ned Linegar, associate secretary of the PSCA in charge of the employment bureau, said that the demand for students who are available for part-time work far exceeds the present number of men who have filled out blanks.

Jobs handled by the bureau range from serving as a dish washer during rushing week, in exchange for meals, to an occasional call for a man who will work as high as 20 or 30 hours a week at a regular position.

Registrants from previous semesters were asked by CA officials to phone the office if they have changed their address recently.

Mass Meeting

store for the incoming class, with four mixers scheduled for this weekend. Two will be held each night, Friday and Saturday, one in the Armory, the other in Rec Hall. These mixers, together with the final Student Union dance in the Armory at 4 today, will provide plenty of opportunity for the freshmen to become acquainted.

Sponsored by WSGA, the mixers Friday and Saturday nights will be closed to all upperclassmen. Asked to act as hosts and hostesses at the affairs are members of Mortar Board, Cwens, Druids, Friars, Blue Key, Pi Lambda Theta, Ellen H. Richards, and Omicron Nu, according to Dorothy K. Brunner, WSGA vice-president.
