

Successful Attendance Greet First Surgical Dressings Class

38 Out Of 75 Coeds Prepared For Work

If the large turnout of Penn State coeds at the surgical dressings meeting last night continues, State College's monthly quota of 9,000 dressings could be greatly increased, announced Mrs. Leonard A. Dogget, Red Cross nurse in the last World War and chairman of the local Red Cross Chapter. Of the 75 women who reported, 38 came prepared to start work last night, Mrs. Dogget stated.

To maintain sanitary conditions, Mrs. Dogget pointed out that workers are required to wear smocks over clothing and coverings for the hair. If a coed has a cold or an infection, Mrs. Dogget urges her not to attend class, as precautions must be taken to keep all dressings as clean as possible in case they have to be used without sterilizing on reaching their destinations.

Explaining Red Cross procedure in rolling dressings, Mrs. Dogget explained that gauze must be cleaned and all loose threads removed. To emphasize neatness and ease in handling, the corners are mitered and pressed carefully. The four by four inch gauze squares fit into paper bags twelve inches high and five inches wide, continued Mrs. Dogget. Each bag, when full, holds 500 dressings.

The War Department disclosed that commercial manufacturers of surgical dressings are able to supply about 10 per cent of the Army and Navy requirements. When asked to supply the other 90 per cent, the Red Cross promptly agreed to do so. Only a few hundred of the 37,000 Red Cross chapters in the country were asked to make these special dressings.

"Since quality more than quantity is a vital factor in the making of surgical dressings, all that do not meet requirements must be made over," Mrs. Dogget concluded.

Grange To Entertain

Grange Dormitory coeds are planning entertainment for a desert party which they will hold in the near future for faculty members, according to Eleanor M. Freedman '44, house president.

Sunday evening Phi Mu will initiate Marion Yacos '46, Helen Barr '46, and Margaret Jack '45.

Out Of The Past

Did You Know That Penn State began as a "Farmer's High School?"

That 119 students were enrolled the first semester?

That there was no kitchen the first year and a board shantee was used to cook and eat in?

That in 1860 the faculty consisted of five men?

That Old Main was once dormitory, classroom, museum, laboratory, and chapel all in one?

That there was one graduate in 1868, none in 1869?

That a train once brought students to a station on the campus—located near where Engineering Unit D now stands?

Big-Little Sisters Will Attend Teas

Little Sisters should contact their Big Sisters for teas in Irvin Hall and Women's Building scheduled for first semester freshmen from 3 to 5 p. m. Sunday, Helen J. Martin, WSGA freshman senator and co-chairman of the teas, announced yesterday.

Freshmen are urged to attend even if their Big Sisters do not go, Miss Martin said.

Parents of freshman women are also invited.

Additional committees for the Women's Building tea, are cleanup—Freshmen Shirley Burdick, chairman; Jean Butz, Betty Casanave, Betty Caplan, Audrey Hartley, Jean Neisley, and Ortrud Wurful; decorations—Evelyn Erieg, chairman; and Mildred Rubin.

The hostess committee for both teas includes WSGA Freshman Council members and other hall officers. Virginia Sykes is committee chairman in Women's Building and Jean Weaver in Irvin Hall.

Gloria McKinley, WSGA first semester freshman senator and co-chairman of the teas, will be in charge of the Irvin Hall tea. All coeds from Irvin and Jordan Hall should attend the tea in Irvin Hall, and all other first semester freshmen should go to Women's Building, Miss Martin stressed.

WRA Opens White Hall For Fifth Play Night; Frosh Win In Hockey

Plans for the fifth White Hall Playnight from 7 to 10 p. m. tomorrow were completed last night as the second week of interclass hockey closed with a freshman victory over juniors.

WRA Bridge Club will be in charge of Playnight, at which bridge, bowling, ping pong, swimming, and badminton will be offered, according to Elizabeth J. McKinley '45, club president.

Contrary to the usual ruling restricting White Hall Play Nighters to coeds, returning parents and alumni are invited to attend the open house, F. Doris Stevenson '44, WRA publicity chairman, stated.

Representing the faculty at Playnight will be Beatrice M. Lowe '40, graduate assistant in physical education, while Adele J. Levin '44, WRA activities chairman, will attend as delegate from WRA Executive Board. Refreshments will be served.

HOCKEY

Creating a record of five wins in six games, the freshman hockey team defeated the juniors 4-1 on Holmes Field last night. Eleanor Wills with two goals and Peggy Quick and Joan Finn with one each accounted for the frosh scoring. Only junior goal was made by Mottie Haverstick.

Sophomore and junior hockey teams will meet on Holmes Field at 4 o'clock today.

CLUB NEWS

WRA Dance Club's rhythmic calisthenics class, continuing from 7 to 8 p. m. each night, will continue next week, according to Marion Hora '43, club president.

Mottie Haverstick, WRA Bowling Club president, stated that members of the ladder tournament should challenge persons ahead of them within the next few days.

Carpenter Releases PSCA Drive Helpers

Names of Faculty Canvass School Chairmen in the annual PSCA Finance Drive have been released by Dr. C. R. Carpenter, associate professor of psychology and head of the faculty division of the campaign.

Faculty members chosen include Dr. Lloyd M. Jones, professor of physical education; C. A. Bonine, professor of geology; Dr. George E. Simpson, associate professor of sociology; Professor Clifford B. Holt, department of electrical engineering.

Dr. P. C. Weaver, School of Education; Miss Ruth Bonde, department of home economics; Dr. A. J. Currier, School of Chemistry and Physics; Professor Henry S. Brunner, School of Agriculture; Mr. Ridge Riley, department of public information; and Miss Helen M. Cooper, Library.

Fine Arts Faculty Sponsors Displays

High schools, women's clubs, and junior colleges throughout the state are becoming "art-minded" through the efforts of the fine arts faculty, headed by J. Burn Helme, professor of fine arts at the College.

Seven "traveling art displays," prepared by the fine arts faculty, are now being circulated throughout Pennsylvania by the extension division of the College Library.

Three of the displays consist of reproductions, one of old masters, one of modern European paintings, and the third of contemporary American artists. Original American prints by contemporary artists, including woodcuts, lithographs, and etchings, comprise two other exhibits and original silk screen prints make up another.

Each display is accompanied by a pamphlet outlining the general field covered by the exhibit and containing descriptive notes on each picture.

We, The Women As Usual, Panhel Postpones Action

If 600 coeds (the approximate number of sorority women on campus) would invest 25 cents each month in war stamps, the total would be $150.

That suggestion was made at Panhellenic Council meeting on Monday. With typical indecision, Panhel postponed action until the next meeting.

Twenty-five cents will buy a pack of cigarettes and two cokes (at pre-war prices) or slightly more than half of a movie ticket. Certainly, there are very few sorority women who could not afford two-bits a month for war stamps.

If the sum of money had been large, we agree that delegates should have returned to houses for deliberation. If it had been a question of rushing policy, again delayed action could be justified.

However, when the sum is small and the need great, we think that, for once, Panhel might have made up its mind.

It's about time that campus foresters came out of the woods to realize that painting advertisements on walks and buildings is a violation of an All-College Cabinet ruling.

In this instance, unfamiliarity with regulations is no excuse; only a little sense is necessary to realize the one should not injure College property.

We suggest that Student Tribunal deal with offenders and supervise removal of paint
