

Theta Sigma Phi To Honor BWOC's At Annual Matrix Dinner Monday

Monday is the night when 300 BWOC's will journey to Nittany Lion Inn prepared for libel, slander, and general fun-making at the annual Matrix Dinner, scheduled for 6:30 p. m. and sponsored by Theta Sigma Phi, national women's journalism honorary.

Voting for Quill Girl, most popular senior coed, continued at Student Union throughout yesterday. Results will be announced at the banquet. Emily L. Funk '43, Theta Sigma Phi president, stated. Seniors Pauline Crossman, Martha Duffman, Nancy E. Gosser, Janet V. Holmes, and Ann Drivas were suggested as Quill Girl candidates, but voting was not restricted to the five named.

Matrix Girl, senior woman who has contributed most to College activities, and Cap Girl, most versatile senior coed, will be selected by members of Theta Sigma Phi and announced at the dinner.

Banquet speaker will be Mrs. Esther Van Wagoner Tuffy, noted Washington newspaper correspondent. Special guests include Mrs. Ralph D. Hetzel, and Miss Charlotte E. Ray, dean of women.

Two skits burlesquing College life will be presented by members of the journalism honorary. Titles of the skits have been announced by Miss Funk as "The Rooming Situation," parodying Penn State's housing problem this fall, and "What Campus Will Be Like Without Men," a preview of the future Penn State.

Women with important College activities have been invited to the dinner, patterned after the annual Washington grand banquet.

Mason's statement will be followed by acceptance of the Shrine: Jerome H. Blakeslee '43, speaking for the student body; Bernard A. Plesser '43 speaking for the Penn State Athletic Association; and President Ralph D. Hetzel, for the Board of Trustees.

The Blue Band will furnish music for the affair, playing as its closing number "Nittany Lion" composed by James A. Leyden '14.

Gray Helps Write Book

William H. Gray, instructor in Latin American history at the College, is co-author of "Other Southern Neighbors," a history book for public schools. The book, which covers all Latin American countries from the Rio Grande to Cape Horn, contains many maps and photographs. Good Neighbor Policy, is the book's theme.

75 Faculty Members Transfer Services From College To War Work

(Continued from page six) being used more in this war than in the last one, the department of physics has been seriously affected by the war.

"Members of the staff have gone to Aberdeen Proving Ground of the Army Ordnance Department, to Wright Field of the Air Forces, to the Naval Research Laboratory, and to the great Radiation Laboratory of the National Defense Research committee at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Large numbers of physicists who would be serving as graduate assistants are also in war industry," stated the Dean.

In the School of Education, headed by Dean Marion R. Trabue, induction of four professors and associate professors into the armed services has necessitated the division of work among other instructors and the discontinuance of some projects, as replacements are not available.

From the School of Agriculture 14 members or 10% of the instructing staff have been placed in positions where they can be more beneficial to the war effort.

Twenty members of the teaching staff of the Liberal Arts School have either resigned or obtained leaves of absence to enter war work. Lieut. G. G. R. Lucas, now of the ROTC department, shifted from his position as economics instructor following United States' entry into the war.

The School of Engineering suffered by the withdrawal of eight of its instructors, while three men left for naval duty from the School of Physical Education and Athletics.

Women In Sports

Frosh enthusiasm is evidently triumphing again.

A squad of 11 frosh is proving this with a one-defeat hockey schedule. Playing against experienced teams which consist almost entirely of phys ed majors, the taken-for-granted underdogs have run up a total of 37 points to their opponents' 17, with one loss and five straight wins.

Stars on the first year team to whom praise for points goes, include Joan Finn, Betty Pike, and Peggy Quick. But that isn't all they've got. A fighting spirit seems to be in evidence throughout the squad and cooperation is the keynote to their success, according to spectators.

It can't be that the frosh are just naturally better players than the upperclass members. It must be that freshmen don't hesitate to give a "hoot" about such things, and that they retain a little of that enthusiasm which seems to live such a short life at College.

With another week of the Fall sport coming up, frosh threaten age-superior teams with a winning streak that might make WRA history.

BUY WAR BONDS AND STAMPS

We, The Women Cheers, Dances, And War Thoughts

To parents and alumni, who are entering the secluded Nittany Valley from a world of men in uniforms and tired war workers, it might appear that there is no war here.

Students still rally around bonfires, cheer at football games, jitterbug at dances, and excite themselves over campus activities. College is still college.

Beneath the collegiate spirit, however, are serious thoughts. Men students realize, for example, that most of them will be in military service or war work either before graduation or immediately afterward. Goeds know that they will be filling both women's and men's jobs, that they will be fighting the war, too.

How does this knowledge affect collegiates? The biggest change, perhaps, is in attitudes. Students are beginning to view studies more objectively and to regard them as preparations for specific jobs.

Student leaders scrutinize activities, aiming to eliminate unnecessary trivia and substitute war work. Coeds, for example, give fewer teas to devote time to making surgical dressings and to drilling. War stamps replace corsages at dances, and such things as fraternity hell weeks are on the way out.

Compared to a factory worker with a 50-hour week or to a soldier in the Solomons, a student's contribution is relatively small. Remembering that education is preparation for duty and that extracurricular activities are being relegated, the potential contribution of Penn State students is huge.

Main Library Exhibits Prestini Wood Work

Exhibit of wood turnings by James L. Prestini now on display at the College Library will be open to the public until Saturday, October 31, according to Willard P. Lewis, College librarian.

Trays, plates, bracelets, and salad sets in the exhibit demonstrate Prestini's ability to enhance the natural beauty of the wood by his skillful execution of intricate and delicate patterns.

With simplicity as the keynote, many of these objects which are made from varied shades and weights of wood are food containers. A large number of bowls for fruit and other purposes are included.

Some are finished with rolled edges to add to their individuality and strength of design. When completed, each piece possesses a soft sheen.

Prestini employs the use of Mexican, Cuban, Honduras, and Peruvian mahoganies as well as cherry, poplar, Australian lacewood, walnut, maple, and birch woods.

A tribute has been made to his skillful craftsmanship by several museums, including the Museum of Modern Art, New York, the Cleveland Museum of Art, Northwestern University, and others.
